SIEGEL'S BOOKS JUGGLED

3 HELD IN SHAMLIAN SLAYING

Bedros Takdarian, Garabed Barbarian and John Ardanian, ranging from eighteen to twenty-three years, pleaded guilty before Associate Justice Chandler in Lawrence District Court today to the murder of John K. Shamlian, the Armenian jewelry salesman, who disappeared February 9 and whose dismembered body was just been found buried in the woods of Frye Village, near Lawrence. They were first held without bail for a continued hearing on March 23, but, just as they were being taken to the county jail, their cases were reopened and they were held for the Essex Grand Jury without bail.

Michael Zakolan, proprietor of a Lawrence coffee house, whose information led to the arrest of the other three, and who had been held as a witness, was arraigned on a charge of being accessory after the fact. He pleaded not guilty and was held for the Grand Jury in $1,000. Up to this afternoon he had been unable to get bail.

WIDOW COLLAPSES.

Mrs. Alice Shamlian, widow of the murdered man, has collapsed at her home, No. 51 Hiawatha road, Mattapan. Ever since her husband left home she has been under a terrible strain, waiting and watching for him.

For hours at time she has sat at the front window of their top-floor apartment, watching for her husband. At times, when she could not bear to sit there, she has hurried up to the Ellis Hill avenue trolley line and looked about, in hopes that her husband might appear. She has had but little sleep, dropping into occasional slumber through sheer exhaustion.

The widow swooned when told of the murder of Mr. Shamlian and the arrest of the three men in Lawrence

INCENSED BY CURLEY, RESIGN

Robert S. Peabody and Daniel H. Coakley, commissioners in charge of the Park and Recreation Department, resigned today as a result of numerous clashes with Mayor Curley and what they term his interference with their department.

The members of this board serve without pay. Peabody and Coakley sent the notice of their resignations to the newspapers today, but up to late this afternoon Mayor Curley had not received the resignations.

The letter of resignation of Peabody and Coakley, the men they say:

Boston, Mass., March 12, 1914.

Hon. James M. Curley,
Mayor of Boston:

Dear Sir—We are in receipt of a letter from you directing us to discharge certain members of our force. At our recent interview you told us that you felt that you should have consulted us before directing the discharge of men in the department, and that no further changes would be directed without conference with us; that we would not be called upon to make haphazard suspensions or discharges, but that you would await a comprehensive plan offered by us, which would cut the department expenses within the necessary limit with as little detriment to the service as possible and without curtailing what appear to us as necessaries and not luxuries. Without such conference we are now directed to suspend or discharge certain of our assistants. The proposed action does not appear to us to follow any good system and, in our opinion, is unwise. If followed out, besides crippling the administrative work, it would practically close the Aquarium where no man with any special knowledge of the work required would remain.

We are of the belief that the people of Boston are interested in their Aquarium and in their Zoo, and we do not desire that economy should take the form of curtailing these activities. We believe as well that Boston citizens are proud of the lead their city has taken in building up a park and recreation system; we believe that the health and future happiness of the growing generation is bound up in the playground system, which has been gradually developed and brought to its present state of efficiency at a very great expense; and we cannot agree on the score of economy to allow this valuable plant to deteriorate under our management.

As we have told you, we would faithfully second every effort of yours for reasonable and sensible economies, but what you ask us to do is neither reasonable nor sensible in our judgment, but rather a "save at the spigot and waste at the bung" plan, which we cannot follow.

The charted places on you the ultimate responsibility and in the belief that our views are not in consonance with yours, we feel we ought not to hamper you in the exercise of that responsibility and, therefore, herewith tender you our resignations.

ROBERT S. PEABODY.
DANIEL H. COAKLEY.

FIGHT 'RING' TO FINISH

A determined fight has been begun to smash the powerful Middlesex County ring. For the first time in its history the ring faces rigid and thorough investigation.

This is the result of the charges made before the legislative Committee on Counties by Middlesex County Commissioner Ernon B. Barlow of Lowell in demanding an investigation of the conduct of the county's affairs by his associate commissioners, Levi S. Gould of Melrose and Chester I. Williams of Wayland.

Commissioner Barlow is leading the fight for a thorough house-cleaning in the county, with District Attorney William J. Corcoran, Representative Henry J. Mahoney of Cambridge and Senator John P. Brennan of Cambridge.

Today they planned a war to the finish against the Republican County Organization in Middlesex, which for years has carried in its political pocket practically every county office. They declared they would keep up their fight until the ring is finally given a knockout blow.

DEMAND REAL PROBE.

They have demanded of the Legislature a real and searching inquiry of Middlesex affairs and their administration. Commissioner Barlow today declared he wanted an investigation that would be fair and thorough whether it was made by a commission appointed by the Governor or by members of the Legislature.

"I am in this thing to a finish," he declared.

The fight to oust the ring is before the Senate on Senator Brennan's bill for a finance commission for the county. In the House Representative Mahoney has a bill for a drastic probe of the county's affairs.

District Attorney Corcoran, who has the power to proceed independently against the ring, was elected on an anti-ring platform. His election was accounted a distinct and severe blow to the Republican organization.

SUIT MAY FOLLOW.

The demand is for a threshing out of all the charges that have been made against the ring. The investigation is also planned to delve into the $35,000 county embezzlement, discovered through the death, apparently by suicide, of a county bookkeeper. This was Fred H. Smith, who died mysteriously on the day his books were to have been examined. A shortage of upwards of $40,000 was found in his accounts. It was claimed he had embezzled $1,522.98 up to the time when Sheriff John Fairbairn took office in 1896 and that since 1896 he had taken $36,157.40 of the county's money.

District Attorney Corcoran is expected to file suit against Sheriff Fairbairn to recover the embezzled funds.

Peters Tells Wilson New Haven Is Shaky

WASHINGTON, March 12.—That the New Haven Railroad is in an even more serious condition of demoralization than the public realizes was stated by Representative Peters of Massachusetts to President Wilson today. Mr. Peters did not touch upon the negotiations now progressing between the department of justice and the railroad, but emphasized the fact that the road is in a very bad condition and that thousands of small stockholders and bondholders are suffering in consequence.

Mr. Peters promised the President his cordial support in the fight for the repeal of the exemption clause of the Panama canal act.

Woman Is Held for Bad Check Deals

Mrs. Edythe E. Ditmars, a music teacher living at No. 44 Teele avenue, Somerville, was in court today charged with obtaining the endorsement of Willis S. Furbhs, a Teele Square druggist, on checks for $70 and $60, for which there were no sufficient funds in the bank. She was held in $2,000 for the Grand Jury. On a charge of the larceny of $78 by means of a worthless check from John J. McDonough, she was fined $50, appealed and was held in $2,000 for the Superior Court.

Doctors Watch Girl Who Took Mercury

Conscious, although suffering great pain, Miss Doris Wood, the seventeen-year-old daughter of H. O. Wood of No. 25 Newbern street, Somerville, who swallowed a bichloride of mercury tablet, is being watched by several doctors at Somerville Hospital. After taking the tablet last Tuesday night in the presence of two brothers, Miss Wood ran half a mile through the streets before she collapsed in front of No. 402 Highland avenue. Mystery shrouds her motive.

Moves to Discharge Charles S. Mellen

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., March 12.—A motion was made today by Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, attorney for C. S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven railroad, charged with manslaughter in connection with the Westport wreck, for the discharge of the accused. State's Attorney Judson has formally filed new information amending the original complaint, but it is being held up by order of Judge Tuttle. Judge Tuttle set 4 o'clock this afternoon for the time of the hearing of the arguments on the motion of the defence.

Dorr Is Taken to the Death House

William A. Dorr, the convicted murderer of George E. Marsh, the wealthy Lynn soap manufacturer, left Salem jail at 10 o'clock for the death house at State Prison, Charlestown.

Sheriff Samuel A. Johnson of Essex County and Deputy Sheriff Arthur Bishop were in charge of Dorr, and the trip was made by automobile.

AMAZING METHODS OF HANDLING MONEY OF POOR DEPOSITORS

The indictment of Henry Siegel and Frank Vogel in New York will lead to court action in Boston, it was today declared, when the employes of the Siegel stores and the depositors who lost their savings in the Siegel bank here demanded that District Attorney Pelletier take acion.

Mr. Pelletier has been investigating the affairs of the store for over a week and has been in consultation with the New York authorities. Assistant District Attorney Arthur C. Train of New York, after giving out amazing details of the strange financial methods employed by Siegel, said:

TO INVESTIGATE IN BOSTON.

"These methods were employed in Boston as well as in New York, and they will be followed up in Boston."

The Boston investigation is based on charges that statements of the condition of the store here were falsified for the purpose of securing loans from banks. The most serious of the New York indictments specifies such a transaction in New York.

The complete exposure of Henry Siegel's "astounding business system," it was learned today, resulted from the confession of Oscar E. Frail and Robert G. McMeekin, confidential men associated with Siegel and Vogel. Under their story—which is backed up by the private ledger of the Fourteenth Street store in New York—the following charges are made:

That depositors were lured in by offers of a high rate of interest—4½ per cent.

That they deliberately falsified the accounts of the Fourteenth street store in New York so that it appeared to have assets of over a million dollars, when as a matter of fact it was insolvent.

MAYOR BLOCKS RETIREMENT OF SUPT. PIERCE

Mayor Curley refused today to approve the retirement of Police Superintendent William H. Pierce. He will withhold his signature from the retirement papers for one year at least.

The Mayor said:

"By refusing to approve this retirement I will save the city $2,512.50 this year. If I do not approve the retirement, Superintendent Pierce will have to remain in office. If I did approve it, it would mean that some one else would take his place at his $5,000 salary and the city would still have to pay Pierce's pension of half-pay."

The superintendent gets $25 a year extra for being a medal of honor man, which accounts for the extra $12.50 on the pension.

GONE THE LIMIT, SAYS ASQUITH ON HOME RULE

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, March 12.—A deadlock has developed in the negotiations over the question of excluding Ulster Province from the operations of the home rule for Ireland bill.

Premier Asquith reiterated today that the government had gone the limit in making concessions to the anti-home rulers of Ulster, but on the other hand the "die-hards" among the Unionists declare that the proposals of the government cannot be accepted because of the clause limiting exclusion to six years.

Sir Edward Carson, one of the foremost Unionist leaders in Ulster, is adopting a moderate course and his counsels may prevail in the end, although the situation is one which is giving the ministry the utmost anxiety. The home rule bill will be up for second reading in the House of Commons on March 26, which gives the leaders on both sides less than three weeks to come to a conclusion.

KING MAY HAVE TO ACT.

As time passes and the situation grows more tense, the probability increases that King George may have to act. So far the King's interest has manifested itself in a constitutional way. He has expressed his desire for a solution which will meet the approval of the Irish Nationalists and yet at the same time placate the Protestants of the Ulster counties, whose political sentiments are those of the Tories.

Further conferences were held today, both by the political leaders outside of the Cabinet and members of the ministry. It was admitted that no progress was made, but the conferees were careful to point out that they believed a solution upon the basis of the Asquith proposals would soon be reached.

Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons that he would make a general statement in regard to the government's proposals on Monday.

The Daily Graphic, a leading Unionist paper of this city, utterly condemns the home rule bill, and says:

"LET THE IRISH SETTLE IT."

"If a measure really solving the Irish problem is to be produced Irishmen themselves must frame it. As long as Irishmen allow themselves to be made the sport of English politicians nothing can be done."

The newspaper urges the government to appoint a committee of leading Irish Nationalists and Irish Unionists to formulate a scheme for the government of Ireland and contends that if such a committee reaches a mutually satisfactory agreement the British parties would not oppose such a solution.

The Daily Chronicle, Liberal, hits a similar idea. It says:

"If Sir Edward Carson could bring himself to have a conference with Mr. Redmond he would be able to get for Ulster almost any terms he pleased, provided the integrity of Ireland is maintained, and Mr. Redmond would be delighted to see Sir Edward Carson first Premier of Ireland."

'LOVE LOG' GIRL GETS $300 FOR HEART WOUND

Miss Margaret Clarke, the corset demonstrator who introduced a "love log" in her suit, was given a $300 verdict by a jury in the Suffolk Superior Court today in her breach of promise suit against Henry J. Woodberry of Roxbury, who said he wanted to die with her.

A sealed verdict was returned by the jury to Judge Brown. Miss Clarke lives at 167 Warren avenue. She testified that she had known Woodberry for seven years. She met him on the street one night. He had asked her to marry him, she said, and she was always ready to do so, but at the last moment he changed his mind. He gave as an excuse his financial condition.

She claimed that he had given her second-handed presents, consisting of a pair of leggins that his mother had worn and had no further use for; a watch and a billfold. She told the court and jury that he called on her every night for months, and sometimes came in the morning.

He charged that she had many gentlemen friends, and produced witnesses to show that she had men callers at her room. She denied these charges. The suit was on trial for nearly four days.

Truant Claims Fat Woman Sat on Him

PASSAIC, N. J., March 12.—Frank Marsh, fourteen, when arraigned for truancy, soberly gave this explanation: "I was sitting in a chair in the library reading when a very stout woman came in. She picked up a book and then stepped backward a few feet and sat right down on me. I did not dare holler, because the signs in the reading rooms say you will be put out if you make any noise. She kept me there for an hour, judge." "W-H-A-T?" gasped Judge Costello. Then he let the lad go.

Ice Jam Threatens Potomac Bridges

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Thousands of tons of ice heaped in a great jam for a mile above the old Aqueduct bridge across the Potomac at Georgetown today, threatens to sweep away several bridges. Army engineers are watching for signs of weakening in the piers and are planning to dynamite the gorge. The ice pack is the most dangerous in many years.

VILLA OPENS CAMPAIGN TO TAKE CAPITAL

CITY OF CHIHUAHUA, Mexico, March 12.—The Constitutionalist army's campaign for the capture of Mexico City opened today.

At dawn General Villa began the embarkation of 5,000 troops for Torreon, which he expects to capture within a week, and from there he will lead his troops against the capital.

Villa will have more than 10,000 soldiers about Torreon when he gives the signal for the attack on that city. His artillery will consist of more than 100 cannon and machine guns. To support the advance of his army he will use an armored motor truck carrying half a dozen machine guns. This was built at Juarez under personal direction of the rebel leader, and he counts upon it to be of great help in the operations of his cavalry.

Constitutionalist officers claim that hundreds of Huerta's soldiers at Torreon have deserted to the Constitutionalist cause within the last week, and declare that the weakened garrison there is likely to surrender without long resistance.

Following close upon the promise of General Carranza that Constitutionalist forces would protect the lives of foreigners in Mexico, news reached here today that Charles Howard, a citizen of the United States, had been killed by Yaqui Indians on the Anthony ranch in the Yaqui river valley while a detachment of Constitutionalist soldiers looked on.

Howard, a colored man who had come from the United States to work for the ranchers, put up a hard fight before he was killed, shooting three Indians to death. Howard was shot twelve times before he died.

Edwin F. Gray, another American, has disappeared in Juarez and efforts to secure a clew to his whereabouts have failed. It is feared that he was included in a number of men recently executed in Juarez.

5TH AVENUE WOMEN FETE I. W. W. CHIEFS

NEW YORK, March 12.—Frank Strong Hamilton, the long-haired leader of the "army of unemployed", "Big Bill" Haywood, the I. W. W. leader; Rose Mahmer, the fiery young woman agitator; about a dozen of the unemployed and sundry anarchists were entertained last night in the home of Mrs. Mabel Dodge, at No. 23 Fifth avenue.

About 200 men and women, in evening dress, and early all women included, smoking cigarettes, took part in the meeting. Between puffs of gold tipped cigarettes men and women piled the visitors with questions about labor conditions and remedies for unemployment.

The meeting was supposed to be secret. Earlier in the evening Mrs. Dodge denied it was to take place, but Hamilton named the meeting place. When he was asked what was the occasion for a clean collar he replied:

"I have been invited by Mrs. Dodge to tell Fifth avenue the condition of the unemployed."

Just who attended the meeting could not be learned. There was commotion when the presence of newspaper men became known. Women in low-necked gowns hid behind escorts and tried to hide their cigarettes. The reporters left when it was announced it was a private meeting.

Major Koehler Is Defended by Hudson

Dispatches from New London, Ct., today showed that Samuel H. Hudson, former License Commissioner and former Assistant Corporation Counsel for Boston, is one of the counsel defending Major Benjamin M. Koehler, who is now being tried by court-martial at Fort Terry. Mr. Hudson is associated with General Harry J. Hawthorne, Major Koehler's military counsel, by courtesy of the court. The War Department has telesraphed orders to expedite the trial as Secretary Garrison is displeased at the continued notoriety.

'President Wilson' on Crossed Wire Gets Bryan's Goat

WASHINGTON, March 12.—William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, called up a newspaper office here last night. The wires were crossed and this was the conversation:

"Hello."

"Hello, this is Secretary Bryan." "This is ——."

"What, who is this?" (Angrily.)

"This is President Wilson."

The story came out when Mr. Bryan was finally connected with the newspaper office and demanded satisfaction. It was agreed that Mr. Bryan had got the wrong number and that it was not the White House either.

ARE YOU TOO FAT?

Here's Quick, Sure Relief Without "Starving" or Drugs

Has your figure lost its beauty in a big blanket of fat? If so, you need Rheumabath. This preparation, dissolved in the hot bath water, makes excess fat disappear in a hurry.

A prominent teacher lost forty-two pounds in three months by using Rheumabath in her bath water.

Rheumabath causes the superfluous fat and effete matter to come out through the 2,000,000 tiny sewers in the skin.

Some of America's most famous actresses carry a supply of Rheumabath with them to keep the weight normal, the skin soft and velvet, the complexion brilliant.

Rheumabath is a white crystalline substance perfected by a noted chemist. It is not a drug to be taken internally, nor a liniment. It contains the peculiar properties of famous Mineral Springs. It is not only a remarkable fat reducer but a great thing for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Grippe, Colds or Insomnia.

Why subject yourself to the humiliation of being too fat when you can obtain relief so easily, quickly and economically with Rheumabath?

If your druggist doesn't sell Rheumabath, send 25 cents to the Rheumabath Company, Dept. 147, Minneapolis, Minn., for a package. Ask for book.

HARPER'S BAZAR.

BURNS MAY SAVE FRANK FROM NOOSE

ATLANTA, Ga., March 12.—Attorneys for Leo M. Frank will attempt to force a confession from the negro, Jim Conley, that he murdered Mary Phagan and accused Frank of the crime to shield himself.

To this end Frank's attorneys will make a determined effort to obtain permission for Detective William J. Burns to go to the jail and interview the negro. Burns will be here the latter part of the week, and Frank's attorneys believe that if the detective is allowed to visit Conley the negro can be induced to confess that he murdered Mary Phagan.

criminals where many others had failed, and it is believed he will be successful if he has a free hand with Conley.

Practically since the first admission that he wrote the murder notes Conley has been zealously guarded from interviewers. When by chance a reporter visits his cell, Conley refuses to talk unless his attorney, William M. Smith, is present and passes on the questions put to him. This rule applies to all except Solicitor Dorsey and Detectives Starnes and Campbell, who have been working directly under the solicitor since the day of the murder.

Burns will ask a free hand with the negro, and friends of Frank feel sure that if he is not hindered by the negro's attorneys and the State authorities, he is likely to obtain a confession, something they assert the police never have earnestly attempted to do. Frank's attorneys may appeal to the courts for an order allowing Burns to see Conley at will.

Found Na Fraud in New Haven Offices

NEW HAVEN, Ct., March 12.—That conditions in the drafting rooms of the New Haven railroad complained of by W. C. Reimann, a former employe, who charged that members of the department had been doing hundreds o foutside work for road officials and others, "did not constitute a 'system' or 'defrauding' the company for personal gain; but certain practices had been allowed which were not to the best interests of the company in the matter of organization ad discipline, and that these practices have been stopped,' are the conclusions of Professor H. C. Emery of Yale, who investigated the charges at the request of the road.

BARBARA PIERCE, who today became the bride of John D. Pearmain in the first of Boston society's Lenten weddings.

The first of Boston's society's Lenten weddings took place at noon today when Miss Barbara Pierce was married to John D. Pearmain, Harvard '13, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace L. Pierce of No. 350 Beacon street. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother, the invitations had been limited to relatives and intimate friends. Rev. S. Endicott Peabody of Groton officiated.

Watson Leonhauser of Montclair, N. J., Harvard '13, was best man. There were no bridesmaids. The bride is a leader in the younger social set and with her sister, Virginia, has been interested in charities.

100 Girls in Fire Panic.

NEW YORK, March 12.—One hundred girls employed in the five-story building at Nos. 25-27 Sullivan street were thrown into panic today by a fire which started shortly after they had gone to work.

DEATH CHARGE STAYS PARDON FOR WEBSTER

PROVIDENCE, March 12.—While the pardon papers for Arthur G. Webster, the long-term robber in Cranston jail, were being made out today for Governor Pothier's signature, a telegram was received by the police from the police of St. Louis Mo., asking that Webster be held for a murder in that city.

The news of the telegram from St. Louis caused a sensation in the State Senate, which had wrangled over the Webster pardon.

On top of these developments came the fact that a mysterious woman, who has been about the State House through the pardon arguments, is working in behalf of Webster. There were three pardon cases on and no one seemed to know which one this woman was interested in. One of the Senators met her today in a corridor and asked her point blank: "Which pardon are you working for?"

"For Webster's," replied the woman. She is about thirty years old and of attractive appearance.

Webster was sentenced sixteen years ago to twenty-five years at Cranston jail for his part in the Fortsmouth car barn robbery, in which a man was killed. Webster always declared the police "framed him up," by putting a revolver in his pocket. He was reputed to be a typical "bad man," but reports of late had him as a reformed and model prisoner. Visitors, especially women, were shown Webster as an example of prison reformation.

Roxbury Industry Seeks $60,000 Fund

The opening speech in the campaign by the Roxbury Institute of Industry and Boys' Club for a building fund will be made by Governor Walsh, who has promised to attend the banquet March 23, which will mark the opening of a twelve-day campaign in which an attempt to raise a fund of from $50,000 to $100,000 will be made.

Daniel T. O'Connell on Stump Tonight

Daniel T. O'Connell, one of the Democratic candidates to succeed Mayor Curley in Congress, will hold the first political rally in the new Municipal building, Broadway, South Boston, this evening. It will be Mr. O'Connell's first appearance before the voters of Wards 14 and 15.

MORSE CURED, PRAISES THE POPE'S DOCTOR

LONDON, March 12.—Charles W. Morse, who has just arrived from Wiesbaden, said today:

"I took the cure three weeks and went straight to Wiesbaden because my old trouble returned. I am delighted to see that my system responded so quickly to treatment. Two years ago at Florence I was a very different man, but in Rome I found the first man who understood my case was Professor Marchiafava, the Pope's doctor.

"While at Wiesbaden I sat in a hot bath from half to three-quarters of an hour each morning and drank four quarts of water daily. I feel all right again."

Mr. Morse is thoroughly enjoying life, although he neither smokes nor drinks. He lives on a restricted diet from which all red meats and starchy foods are rigorously excluded.

"I never smoked and never drank alcohol in my life so it is no deprivation to do without them," he said.

Asked if he had consulted a doctor in London, Morse, waving his hand affectionately in the direction of his wife, said:

"There's my doctor in London, and the best and kindest there is."

New Spring Sign, Winsted Awakens

WINSTED, Ct., March 12.—Lester Barnes, made up artistically in his wife's best gown and corset, with a plume-bedecked hat, bought cigarettes in a drug store and lighted one. He shocked all spectators. Next he entered a men's clubhouse, canvassing for woman suffrage. Before the trip was over one member proposed marriage.

Declares Robber in Asylum Is Sane

Thomas G. Connolly, counsel for Sambrill Herris of Taunton, now confined in the insane department of the State farm at Bridgewater, will make an attempt to have Herris released from the institution on the grounds that he was illegally committed, and that he is sane. Herris was arrested some years ago in Taunton and sentenced to the Plymouth County House of Correction for robbery. He escaped, was rearrested and sent to prison and later taken to Bridgewater as insane.

WOMEN EMPLOYES TELL OF SAVINGS GONE IN SIEGEL'S BOSTON BANK

Many Now Without Employment Declare They Have Lost Hard-Earned Savings in Crash. Call for Better State Protection.

Employes of the bankrupt Henry Siegel Company store in Boston who lost their savings in the failure of the Siegel Bank today demanded that District Attorney Pelletier take Grand Jury action.

Buyers, assistant buyers, floorwalkers, salesgirls, elevator engineers, scrub women and even John Albacentie, the bootblack on the second landing, have been caught in the wreck of the business.

They cite that Grand Jury action is just as important in Boston as it is in New York. They say the first debts to be paid by the receivers ought to be the claims of hard-working employes, who, according to their charges, were induced to invest part of their wages in the store bank, when other banking institutions of reputation in the city would have been their choice.

DEPOSITS OF $80,000.

Details of the collapse of the Siegel bank in Boston as a result of the wholesale failure of Siegel enterprises were learned today for the first time. They tell a pathetic story.

They show how $80,000 in savings, deposited largely by employes of the store, have probably been lost in the crash. The AMERICAN learned today that there were 200 depositors in the Siegel bank of Boston, whose savings made up the $80,000.

Some of the depositors were interested in the store, and few of them could ill afford to lose a dollar. The majority are the girls of the retail establishment. There were the scant savings of salesgirls, alone in the city, the cautious eyes of workingmen with children who came to buy bargains and who felt that money in such an exhibitionist way as safer as in a government vault.

Probably the most important witness in the event of Grand Jury proceedings in Boston is John Albacentie. John had a shoe polishing booth on the second landing, near the millinery department. Women were his chief customers. He had $106.40 in the Siegel bank. He said today:

BOOTBLACK'S STORY.

"I don't think they treated me right. I deposited $20 in cash on January 29, days and days after the failure, and they took it. They didn't tell me anything about such things were. They simply took the cash and asked for my passbook, but I refused to give it to them. My wife and I have a boy of fifteen. I had to work hard for that money."

Miss Annie Golding, buyer of shirt waists, said:

"I lost $2,470 in the store bank. I deposited a check for $54 on December 22, and two days later deposited $30 in cash.

"I have been with Henry Siegel for years. I have made money for dollars' for him. I think Mr. Siegel and Mr. Vogel are fine men and would be willing to pay back dollar for dollar if given an opportunity.

"SHAME TO STATE."

"But I don't think the employes of this store were treated right in our bank here," District Attorney Pelletier ought to get busy at once. There is plenty for him to do. It was a shame and disgrace to the city of Boston and the State of Massachusetts to have that bank run in the loose manner it was.

"No precautions were used at all. Of course the door plate proclaimed how it was not under the jurisdiction of the bank commissioner of Massachusetts, but there should be some law to protect the citizens of the State, and especially wage-earners. The very saddest part of this big and deplorable failure is the collapse of the banks in the Boston and New York stores.

"It takes every dollar I have. Other employes lost money in the bank and in stock. We buyers also lost considerable in commissions. Mine would amount to $250 or more."

Donald F. Bulson, upholstery buyer, said:

"I have been with the Siegel people fifteen years. I deposited $2,000 in the bank and $1,000 in stock. Between the Boston and New York stores I lost $3,000 of my savings. James McGuiness, gents' furnishings buyer in the New York store, and lost his position when the store was assonged, had $10,000 invested. He got a position in St. Louis and died his life in the St. Louis Club fire a few days ago. He left a widow and two or three children."

H. S. Kline, linen buyer, said:

"I lost $2,000 in stock and $500 cash in the bank. I have been with Siegel for fourteen years. I can't afford it either. None of us can. Touch on a lot of the women and girls. Just think what it means. They have been putting aside a few dollars every week for years, and depriving themselves in doing it, and for what? To lose every penny."

George Crosby, assistant superintendent of the Boston store, said:

"I lost $1,000. Most of it was my wife's money. I don't suppose we've got a look in, but I do hope the receivers will see their way clear to reimburse some of the girls, at any rate. Pretty hard to get blood from a stone, though. I don't suppose there are many assets."

PENNILESS, JOBLESS.

Max H. L. Rice, assistant buyer in the underwear department at Siegel's, said:

"I don't mind telling anyone that I'm pretty disgusted. My bank book has a mark in the words—$250—I had deposited in this bank. Now here I am penniless and without a job. On February 28 I went upstairs to the bank and tried to get a check out to send to my sister in Providence so that she could have an operation performed.

"I was told to come later for it. I did and this is what I got—nothing. Jobs are hard to get this time of the year, too. I don't really know what to do. I've been here for seven years.

"I haven't mentioned the sick benefit which we are obliged to pay out of our salary each month. I have paid 49 cents a month to this sick benefit. What do I get here? Nothing.

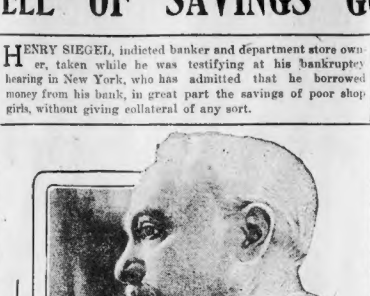
"I tell you it is disheartening. It seems as if there should be some law to protect those who in good faith put their first pile of hard-earned money into this bank. Sympathy is of course acceptable, but it doesn't earn our bread and butter for us. There are no jobs in sight and no money. It is a pretty hard outlook."

HAD $1,100 IN BANK.

Miss Mary A. Nihan, floor manager in the suit department of Siegel's, of No. 94 Berkshire street, Cambridge, said:

"Well, I'm pretty nearly all in. I haven't been myself for the last two weeks. I had $1,100 in the bank. What have I got now. Not a thing. I'm sick at heart, for you know $1,100 is a lot of money. Some time ago I had an endowment policy mature with an insurance company. I received the face value and couldn't get it in the bank quick enough. I felt pretty proud to think that I had something like this put away for a rainy day. For twenty years I paid my premiums on that policy and who rewarded by receiving the amount in cash. Now where is the $1,100.

"Then, too, where is there. Good positions are scarce. I have people dependent upon me and that is what makes it hard. I have another policy maturing soon and I was intending to deposit that, too. I'm saved that much, thank goodness. Of course most of the Boston depositors feel sorrier for the poorer depositors in New York City. It's a most pitiful tale. The worst of it is there doesn't seem to be any redress for us. I went to the head ones personally and told them it seemed as though I could get something out in merchandise, but, of course, they have no control now. I'd welcome one if it would be a good thing if they would give some of the $500 a day paid to the receivers to some of those who have lost so much. It's a very pitiful state of things and the girls I tell you are pretty blue. You know what it is for young girls out of employment walking the streets trying to find work."



HENRY SIEGEL, indicted banker and department store owner, taken while he was testifying at his bankruptcy hearing in New York, who has admitted that he borrowed money from his bank, in great part the savings of poor shop girls, without giving collateral of any sort.

ROMANTIC RISE AND FALL OF HENRY SIEGEL

Henry Siegel, under indictment in New York for grand larceny because he secured funds on false statements, has had a romantic career. The high tide of his fortunes came in 1902, when he has declared he was worth $4,500,000. Today he is penniless, dependent on the charity of his friends, and his great property is bankrupt.

His wife, from whom he has been separated for four years, is living in New York. He has been paying her $25,000 a year. His own total "salary" was $44,000; but he has admitted he may have used some of the $140,000 loaned to him personally by the Siegel bank for his personal expenses.

Henry Siegel was born in Germany in 1852. His father was a lumbermaster. Educated in Germany and in this country, he married Julia Rosenbaum in Chicago in 1885, and she died a year later. In 1898 he married Mrs. Marie Vaughan Wilde, daughter of Judge J. G. Vaughan. She has two daughters—one of whom married an Italian title.

Siegel's own daughter married T. W. Cavendish, an Englishman of good family and of wealth. Cavendish was one of those who died on the Titanic. Mr. Cavendish was worth $1,000,000. He has two sons.

Siegel's parents came to the United States when he was fifteen years old, and in 1876 Siegel established the cloak manufacturing firm of Siegel, Hartsfeld & Co; later Siegel Brothers. Mr. Siegel eventually established the big Siegel-Cooper department store in Chicago—one of the few stores of his chain which still pays a profit. In 1896 Siegel branched out in New York, establishing a Siegel-Cooper store there. In January, 1902, he purchased the Simpson-Crawford store in New York, and in 1907 established his Boston store. Before the failure he had six great stores under his personal management.

HAD $4,500,000.

Mr. Siegel declares he put every cent of his property at forfeit in an effort to save his stores from failure.

In proceedings in New York, he said: "I was worth $4,500,000 in 1902. Since then my fortunes have steadily declined. Since the receivership I have received no money. Up to that time my salary was about $4,000 a month. It figured $46,000 a year.

"Now—I have no money. I am living at the Majestic Hotel with an old friend, a banker, who is paying all my expenses. I have $7,000 in the bank. My house on Eighty-second street, valued at $300,000, carries a mortgage for half that amount. My property at Mamaroneck is heavily encumbered.

"I carry a life insurance of something over $50,000 in favor of my daughter, Mrs. Cavendish."

Mr. Siegel's amazing viewpoint toward the money in his banks was revealed by this other statement:

VIEWPOINT ON DEPOSITS.

"We considered the money deposited in the bank our own private money, and the obligation a private one of Mr. Vogel and myself."

At the close of these proceedings—some days ago—Mr. Siegel said emphatically:

"Every creditor of the bank will be paid in time. If they will give us a chance to reorganize our stores, every dollar will be paid. It is only a question of time. I will make it my life work to see that every dollar is paid."

Then came the ultimate crash—the indictments—and the revelations of the real condition of the Siegel companies—many times worse than had been supposed.

Reinstate Newton's "Milk" Policeman

David Neagle, the Newton policeman who was removed last May after admitting that he drank milk from bottles left at the store of John Ayers, just across the line in Wellesley, was today ordered re-instated by Mayor Edwin O. Childs. Mayor Childs said his removal was illegal under the charter except on order of the Mayor. Neagle was removed by Chief Mitchell.

SECRETARIES REVEAL SIEGEL BOOK JUGGLING

The statements of the confidential men show how a losing business for years was made to appear a success; how false books were deliberately manufactured while the little ledger told the truth; how false statements were prepared for merchants and bankers; how losses were made to appear as gains; how liabilities were turned into assets, and then how $2,500,000 of money deposited in the private bank was poured into this losing business, switched around, and checks representing sums as high as $750,000 deliberately cancelled.

The secretaries tell how the Siegel Stores Corporation, pouring first $800,000 into the business and then $600,000, manipulated payments so that assets were conjured out of nothing, and finally they told how they were compelled to show profits where no profits existed.

GAVE "BALD" ORDERS.

The statement of the men under oath narrate specific conferences with specific orders from both men, which were said to exceed in baldness anything before heard of in the District Attorney's office. Out of these statements as many indictments as the Grand Jury thinks necessary will come. New ones are already drawn, and it is thought they will come down in a few days.

Assistant District Attorney Train has said that the evidence justified fifty more indictments, if they are necessary.

The Boston store of the Henry Siegel Company has lost $1,500,000 since it was established in 1906. Its location was considered bad. Mr. Siegel figured to lose a million dollars in his first three years, and then to show a profit; but his gross business never came within a million dollars of the expected mark. He estimated a profit at $7,000,000, but has never done over $6,000,000 gross business.

BORROWED $400,000.

The Boston store had borrowed $400,000 from the Siegel bank in New York, and the investigation will turn here to trace that money.

Siegel admitted on the witness stand that neither he nor Vogel put one cent of money into the New York bank on Fourteenth street.

He was being questioned by Irving Ernst before United States Commissioner Gilchrist. Here is the colloquy:

Ernst: What capital did you put in the Fourteenth street bank?

Siegel: None.

Ernst: What capital did Vogel put in?

Siegel: None.

He further told how he and Vogel borrowed money from the bank without giving collateral. He stated that he paid no attention to the annual statements, showing or purporting to show the condition of the bank. Concerning these statements, Assistant District-Attorney Train said:

"The present indictments are only preliminary. We cite only scratches the surface. We have gone back only five years. It is safe to say that every statement made during that time was false."

Siegel testified that his personal drawing account was about $60,000 a year. Mrs. Henry Siegel—a former Chicago newspaper woman, whose daughter married an Italian Prince—has not been living with her husband, but has received, it is stated, an income of $25,000 a year from him.

Mr. Siegel commented that he was "aided his bankruptcy had relieved him of this payment."

The statement to the Bank of Commerce, on which loans of $100,000 were obtained on four notes of $25,000 each, as a result of which one indictment was found, revealed a discrepency of $1,469,928. It showed net worth of $1,153,000, instead of which there was a deficit of at least $350,000, and the corporation at that time, December 31, 1912, was insolvent. Mr. Train explained the transactions thus:

"The scheme was worked in this way: The regular books were kept properly. At the end of the year Siegel and Vogel would send an inquest. They would decide what profit had better be shown. If they decided on $15,000 the books would be handed over to an 'expert,' and the books that were to be shown to the banks so get a loan would be doctored to show a gain of that amount.

"The next year they would decide on a profit of $25,000 in order to make a better showing than the previous year, and the 'expert' would be called in to make the assets and liabilities show a profit of $25,000."

Siegel's examination before Commissioner Gilchrist was made in the presence of Miss Jessie Martin, A. N. Bresel and Jacob Latzer, representing the depositors.

Irving L. Ernst conducted the examination. He asked Siegel if he had ever been in the banking business before he started the bank in the Fourteenth street store. He replied that he had a bank in the Chicago store. He said neither he nor Vogel put any money in the bank in New York.

The witness said they had obtained a bond for $100,000 to deposit with the State Comptroller, but he could not remember from what company it was obtained.

Siegel admitted that the loans were made to the stores by himself and Vogel, and that he borrowed about $140,000 personally, about four years ago. He said he did not know whether there had ever been an agreement to pay interest to the bank on money loaned to the stores, but said he paid interest.

"CASCARETS" THE BEST LAXATIVE

If constipated, bilious, headachy, Stomach sour—Clean up to-night!

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, cant sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets today, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

Forget Your Stomach

Anyone in perfect health never "feels" at the stomach. It's forgotten like any other part of a perfect running machine. No jar, no shock, no sensations at all; just easy, pleasant, restful work—duty well done.

The Way

lies in the proper selection of food and drink, getting down to Nature's principles—plenty of fresh air, good water, and particularly plenty of good food that will easily digest, and nourish and rebuild—not clog up.

Understanding how the body works upon food and what elements it requires to rebuild itself, this knowledge was used to produce the perfect food—

Grape-Nuts

It contains the natural Phosphate of Potash which the life forces especially require for rebuilding bone, muscle, brain and nerves.

Then again, in Grape-Nuts a part of the starch of the wheat and barley has been changed into sugar by the baking at the factory. That is exactly the condition which starchy food—bread, oatmeal, potatoes, etc.—assumes in the act of natural digestion. So we find Grape-Nuts has passed through this process outside the body, and is therefore partially pre-digested—a tremendous help for those who are a bit weak in digestive power. And so of health, with its glow, vigor and energy, will come back. The years are forgotten, and so is the stomach, but you'll know

FORBES WARNS THE COMMERCE BOARD OF PERIL

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

A knowledge of current conditions and of possible dangers impels me to address the following OPEN LETTER to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

* * *

Gentlemen of the Interstate Commerce Commission:

Are you aware that, partly owing to your course of action, the country is in peril of suffering an upheaval disastrous to labor, to the railroads, to investors, to industry, to the public at large and to the administration?

Do you realize that in your hands have been placed responsibilities comparable only with those devolving upon the Supreme Court of the United States?

You have been given control of the greatest industry in the country, its system of transportation, on whose welfare depends, directly or indirectly, the welfare of every man, woman and child in the Union.

You are responsible to Congress alone.

You are more than a quasi-judicial body; there have been reposed in you administrative functions of the gravest importance.

Now, rightly or wrongly, your actions have created the very general belief that, instead of holding the scales of justice even between the railroads and shippers, you have become an anti-railroad body.

In ruling—perhaps wisely—against the increase in freight rates applied for in 1910 you gave reasons which were supported by arguments and statistics embodying serious misrepresentation of facts. Your misuse of figures on that occasion raised doubts in well-informed minds of your acumen—or your ability—to be strictly impartial in dealing with large railroad and financial problems.

Since then the position of our railroads has grown distinctly worse.

The confidence of investors, both in Europe and at home, has been so shaken that many roads are today in a parlous financial state.

During the year 1914, 1915 and 1916 maturing railroad obligations alone will call for upward of $1,000,000,000—this without providing one dollar of additional capital for any purpose whatsoever.

How debts falling due are to be met and new capital necessary to maintain solvency is to be raised are problems now exercising grave concern in the financial and railroad world.

Whether these problems can be handled without plunging the country into general disaster depends in large measure upon the course you choose to follow. The eyes of financial Europe and of thinking American citizens are upon you at this moment, anxiously awaiting announcement of your policy.

The state of mind existing today in the most responsible circles is not conducive to that speedy return of prosperity which the deplorable prevalence of unemployment and discontent renders so extremely desirable.

Without overstating the facts, it can be said that those who are charged with the task of directing and managing the country's railroads are in danger, if further denied the co-operation of the government and your body, of abandoning as hopeless all efforts to overcome multiplying difficulties.

I beg you to ponder these words uttered this week by Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad:

"There is more need than you, perhaps, realize, for efforts to prevent calamity.

"What are you gentlemen of the Interstate Commerce Commission, you guardians of the nation's railroads, doing to prevent calamity?

"One of your number has just caused to be published, in sensational manner, charges of 'serious irregularities' against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, which 'irregularities'—confined wholly to bookkeeping—were committed several years ago and pointed out at that time by the financial press.

"Has it taken you three years to discover what the financial press discovered immediately the company issued its annual report?

"If not, why is the subject treated by you so sensationally at this unfortunate juncture, when the solvency of numbers of railroads and the position of the railroads as a whole are occasioning so much concern and militating so strongly against a revival in business which, if much longer delayed, cannot but lead to unhappy consequences to government and governed alike?

"Not content to aggravate the unrest by harking back at this juncture to a three-year-old incident admittedly indefensible, you add the alarming statement that 'in MANY instances' similar irregularities have been perpetrated.

"Why this vague, panic-breeding allegation?

"Are you concealing wrongdoing by MANY other roads?

"Is it your intention to explode these bombs periodically, whenever your fancy, or what you may regard as expedience dictates?

"Why single out one railroad for exposure and shield MANY OTHERS you know to be equally guilty?

"Can you not see how disquieting is the effect of your very serious allegation?

"How are investors to know that the road whose securities they hold is not one of the MANY who have juggled their accounts to flimflam the public?

"The St. Paul's shares shrank $9,000,000 in market value on your unexpected and alarmist announcement.

"Are other stocks to be forced down equal amounts from time to time, whenever you see fit to expose the MANY guilty companies?

"Gentlemen, I ask you to consider whether the time for purposeless recrimination has not passed.

"I ask you to consider whether the time has not come to cease DESTRUCTIVE action and to concentrate upon a CONSTRUCTIVE policy.

"You have before you, and have had before you for many months, an application by Eastern railroads for permission to increase their freight rates five per cent.

"The railroads have co-operated with you in supplying all needful facts to judge their case.

"Can you not expedite your deliberations?"

Marvelous Variety and Remarkable Stock Completeness in Many Beautiful Garments from Abroad as Well as at Home

An Authentic Showing of Spring Apparel

More than Fifty Buyers from this store have each spent from a few weeks to three months abroad in order that the Women of New England may have opportunity to choose from the Most Beautiful Creations of Paris, London, Berlin and Vienna.

Therefore, This Store is Always the First to Show the Newest Styles, as embodied in Imported Models and American Adaptations, and always at Prices that are RIGHT. This Policy has established this House as Style Leaders in New England.

New Styles in Evening Costumes

Are Beautiful and Striking

One of our buyers just returned from Paris and filled with enthusiasm over the new styles has brought back many thousands of dollars' worth of the new models which are now being placed on show.

In Gowns the skirts run to two extremes either narrower than before or, following some of Premet's most striking creations, approximating the skirts of 100 years ago very full with a little crinoline. The old colors are also much in vogue and flouncings are much in favor.

THREE-PIECE COSTUMES—In Cascadu Crepe, embroidered chiffon blouse 85.00

POMPADOUR CHARMEUSE GOWNS—In bouffant effect.. 75.00

FLOWERED TAFFETA AFTERNOON GOWN..... 50.00

Many Beautiful Models Creations from Paris

Are Now Being Shown

The Style Show on the second floor is complete and of wonderful interest. We are showing models from Premet, Therese Blanche, Poiret, Morris Mayer, Brandt, Rosendal and many others.

In materials one thing is most noticeable—this is a great taffeta season. It is taffeta and net, taffeta and batiste, figured crepes and taffeta and then—Pussy Willow Taffeta in wonderful flowered effects. Crepes are also much used.

PUSSY WILLOW TAFFETA GOWNS—In plain and flowered effects 35.00

TAFFETA AFTERNOON GOWNS—In ripple flounce and pannier styles 75.00

PARIS MODEL GOWNS—In lingerie, crepe and taffeta, 95.00 to 250.00

New Waists

Many Effective Models

The new Blouses were never so beautiful, never so effective. The materials run to fine Organdies, Voiles and Crepes, Handkerchief Linens and Shadow Laces. Suedes in contrasting shades are combined with crepe, touches of color in hand-embroidery and new Medici Byron and Gladstone collar effects give diversity in the Lingerie Blouses.

In the Silk Blouses the popular materials are the new Crepe de Chine, the new Georgette Crepes, Fine Laces and Nets; the new colors, light pastel shades—peach, mais, melon and flesh colors—the necks are invariably low.

A BLACK SHADOW LACE BLOUSE over foundation of white net and chiffon, has a soft roll collar of white shadow lace; the under bodice is trimmed with bands of gilt braid—black moire girdle 27.50

BEAUTIFUL WASHABLE CHIFFON BLOUSE, with lace collar, heavy embroidery and tucked panels; is much admired 8.95

NEW CRINKLED CREPE BLOUSE, shown in the illustration, has a colored Suede belt and tie to match, vestee is hand embroidered in mais silk lines and blue dots; ornamental glass buttons 6.95

NEW VOILE BLOUSE, with a cowl collar and extended lapels, forming a Jabot effect; is a beautiful example of the new styles 5.00

Other Waists 1.00 to 60.00

The New Skirts

Some Show Bustle Effects

There's a wonderful showing of New Separate Skirts in this enlarged section, including the new flounced and ruffled effects. Some are draped in such a way as to more than suggest the bustle—but chic—extremely so.

Materials most favored are taffeta, moire, crepe, charmeuse and bengaline. In the tailored models the new plaids are particularly effective.

NEW PLAID WALKING SKIRTS—In new green and blue plaid; a new tailored model, made with pocket on front with fob. An attractive model. At 7.50

NEW WOOL CREPE SKIRT—A new ruffled tunic effect in black and navy. A smart new model for immediate wear. Special value.. 10.75

NEW TAFFETA SILK DRESS SKIRT—An attractive ruffled tunic model, finished with soft taffeta girdle. A stunning new skirt, specially priced 10.75

Other Skirts—5.00 to 32.50

Paris Millinery

Many Beautiful Imported Hats

The Paris Hats are distinctly smaller than last season—in some cases so small as to seem almost like a head dress and showing much more of the hair than formerly—the crowns are low—the new plateau effect; the bandeau is much used to tip one side of the hat away from the face.

The general effect of the new styles is fascinating in the extreme. In trimming the early models show a tendency to tiny flowered effects interspersed with an occasional large flower like an American Beauty; also extremes in feather decoration, such as the new fancy French ostrich heads and some startling beautiful effects in Goura.

AN ORIGINAL MADAM LOUISON MODEL HAT, as shown in the illustration—is a beautiful Watteau shape, a harmony in Gendarme blue; faced with black velvet under the brim; the hat is of fine Swiss Milan hemp braid, the plateau shaped crown and a pompon effect of eight French ostrich heads and the bandeau does give it a particularly picturesque effect 85.00

NEW ANDALUSIAN SAILOR—Exact reproduction of an imported model, made of French blue hemp braid, has a brim scarcely two inches wide faced above with a shirring of moire silk and a platting of moire half way up the crown; a large butterfly effect of Goura—an exceptionally smart tailored hat..... 35.00

Other New Hats—10.00 to 150.00

New Tailored Suits

Great Variety in Models

The new Tailored Suits emphasize the shortened coat some almost bolero in form, and the ripple and simpler forms of draped and tunic skirts. The styles follow the suggestions of the evening gowns and dancing frocks en silhouette with such modifications as are due to the difference in material.

The new Tailored Suits present a greater diversity than formerly. All tailor-made girls will not look alike this year by any means. Some of the smartest and most attractive of the new models are just coming in from abroad. A daily visit to this wonderful second floor is like a continued story of increasing interest and a revelation in the new styles.

NEW TAILORED MODEL—In fine blue serge, kimono sleeves and pronounced yoke back and white silk collar; the blouse is finished with a wide belt; the skirt is tunic style with apron effect 30.00

IMPORTED WOOL MOIRE TAILORED SUIT—In golden brown, a material which will not crush or wrinkle; in a very natty model —a little loose fitting jacket with plaits over the shoulder in front, pretty belted back and new tunic skirt 40.00

Other Spring Suits 18.50 to 125.00

Coats and Wraps

Garments for Every Occasion

Coats are much shorter and are worn in great variety of little jacket and coatee styles with separate skirts. But wraps and coats of all lengths are also good, such as the New English Top Coats, 45 inches long, with deep ripple back; New Cutaway Coats with deep flare ruffle; Natty Short Silk Coatees. The short and ¾ length coats are most in demand at present.

New Rainy Weather Coats are shown in many high-grade materials, such as Cruveneted Tweeds, Gabardines and Novelty Checks.

NEW DRESSY AND SEMI-DRESSY COATS—In Silk Moire, Taffeta, Charmeuse, Duvetyne, Crepe, Bengaline, Poplin and Imported Novelty Fabrics. Prices ..... 18.50 to 75.00

NEW STREET AND GENERAL UTILITY COATS—In wool crepe and poplin, serges, gabardines, coverts, checks and fancy plaids, bayadere stripes and fancy mixtures ..... 15.00 to 45.00

NEW MOTOR AND TOURIST COATS—In many exclusive fabrics, both foreign and domestic homespuns, tweeds and fancy mixtures ..... 15.00 to 50.00

RAINY DAY COATS—Of worsteds, gabardines, rubberized crepe de chine, silks, bombazines, single and double textures and all rubber coats ..... 5.00 to 25.00

Other New Coats and Wraps—15.00 to 150.00

RELATIVES OF SLAIN JEWELER CRY VENGEANCE

Following the collapse came hysterical sobs and demands for vengeance. The family physician is attending the distracted woman.

VENGEANCE DEMANDED.

Relatives of the murdered man, by blood and marriage, join the widow's cry for punishment of the murderers. J. G. Eurengy, Mrs. Shamlian's brother, who lives on the second floor, said today:

"We will prosecute this case to the utmost. We will fight to the end to see that my brother-in-law's murderers get their deserts. Men of that type are dogs. They kill a man for a few dollars. They did not have to murder my brother-in-law to rob him. They could have taken his jewelry but spared his life and not taken him from his wife and children."

The three-family house on Hiawatha road is more like a one-family structure, on account of the close relationship of the tenants. On the top floor dwelt the murder victim, with his wife and two children, Josephine, fourteen, and Henry, five.

On the ground floor live M. K. Shamlian and his wife. He is brother of the murder victim and his wife is Mrs. Alice Shamlian's sister. On the middle floor live Mr. and Mrs. Eurenzy, parents of Mrs. M. K. and Mrs. Alice Shamlian, and their son, J. G. Eugenzy.

IDENTIFIES THE BODY.

M. K. Shamlian went to Lawrence when the first news came that his brother's body had been found. He identified today that he had identified the dismembered remains and that he would remain in Lawrence through the court proceedings and autopsy.

The Lawrence police are searching for the handbag and $700 worth of jewelry which Shamlian had when he left home on February 9. The last seen of him was when he was making his business rounds in Lawrence that day.

Following information given by Zakojian, the body was found in a lonely field in Frye Village, three miles from Lawrence, on the road to the Jewish cemetery in West Andover. The body, in three separate bundles, containing the dismembered parts except arms, which were thrown into the Merrimac river, was hacked up with a meat saw, heavy table knives and a hatchet, the police say, by Bedros Takarian, eighteen, who, according to confession, struck the first fatal blow with a hammer, in the Armenian club room at No. 321 Common street, almost opposite the Lawrence police headquarters.

Takharian, it is charged, was assisted by Garabed Barbarian, twenty, and Jonn Arsamin, twenty-three, all Armenian mill workers, in cutting up and disposing of the body. Shamlian was lured to the clubroom to sell a watch.

During the transaction the three men placed a quarrel with him, the police claim, and Bedros struck him over the head with a hammer, killing him. The body was left in the clubroom over night and taken to West Andover the following afternoon in bundles made from new comforters purchased for the purpose.

A friendly milk man carried the bundles to a point near the spot for the men and they carried it from the highway to the spot where it was found.

HOLD THREE IN DEATH MYSTERY OF LYNN MAN

Mark Brennan of Brennan Brothers, leather manufacturers in Lynn, and Frederick T. Devine and Ellsworth Cressey, employes of the firm, were held in $1,500 a piece in Lynn District Court today for a continued hearing on March 19 on joint charges of manslaughter in connection with the death of John P. Williams, the shoe concentration man who was found dying Tuesday evening on Broad street, in the Lynn shoe district. The defendants made no plea. Brennan, who had been out on $1,500 bail since his arrest last night, renewed his bond. Up to this afternoon Cressey and Devine had not been bailed.

STORIES DIFFER.

Brennan lives at No. 179 Ocean avenue, Swiss. Devine lives at No. 61 Buffum street, Lynn, and Cressey at No. 4 Stewart street, Lynn. The Brennan leather business is on Broad street. Williams was found on the sidewalk in front of No. 215 Broad street, not far from the Brennan place. He was lying in a pool of blood, with a fracture at the base of his skull, a cut under the left ear, a split scalp on the left temple and swollen bruises on the nose.

Chief Inspector Wilson Thorne, who has been in charge of the case, said today that Cressey tells this story:

"Williams came into Brennan's shop at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon. There was blood on his head and face. Devine washed the blood off. Then we went to Boston and got some liquor, while the others waited. When the liquor was brought we stayed there drinking until 9 o'clock. I went to the train with Brennan, leaving Devine on Broad street. Williams started for his own home a short distance from the shop. That is the last I saw of him."

Inspector Thorne says that Devine corroborates Cressey's story, while Brennan says: "I didn't see any injuries on Williams at all."

MAY HAVE CASHED CHECK.

Mrs. Grace Whittier of No. 15 Suffolk street, Williams' niece, with whom he lived, says that the check which Williams is supposed to have received Tuesday and possibly to have cashed was to be sent him by a man against whom he had begun or threatened suit to collect a commission. Efforts are being made to learn if Williams received the check and cashed it.

One theory has been that Williams was killed by a fall downstairs, but Medical Examiner Pinkham, who made a preliminary examination of the body yesterday, says that only a severe fall, down a very long flight, would inflict the injuries shown. The medical examiner said that a blow on the head with some blunt instrument would have produced the fracture of the skull which resulted in death. Dr. Pinkham began the autopsy this noon.

THREATEN TO LYNCH GIRL'S ASSAILANT

WEST BOYLSTON, March 12.—Threats to lynch Albert Wilkins, the fifteen-year-old State charge, were made by three armed posses that are beating the woods for the alleged assailant of Mrs Clarence Johnson, the young wife, who claims that she was attacked by the boy.

Sheriff Frank H. Baldwin, Clarence Johnson, the husband of the woman, and Harvey Keyes, her father, slept at the end of a lost trail, and early today picked it up again. They found the gun which, it is claimed, was used by the fugitive to hold up Mrs. Johnson.

Keyes, in whose home Wilkins lived, said today that Wilkins had taken fifty rounds of ammunition with him when he left with the gun. Mrs. Johnson claimed that she was held up by Wilkins yesterday afternoon. She was walking along a lonely road when he stepped out of the woods, she said, aimed the rifle at her, and then made an attempt to attack her. She fought him off. Wilkins was trailed for a number of miles after she reported the attack.

WALSH RIGHT, SAYS WOMAN ON LABOR BOARD

MRS. MARY H. DEWEY, one of the members of the State Labor Board ousted by Governor Walsh, who praises course the executive has taken.

Mrs. Mary H. Dewey, wife of Professor Davis R. Dewey of Harvard and the woman member of the State Board of Labor and Industries, which was removed by Governor Walsh, today praised the Governor for his action.

"I believe Governor Walsh is only desirous of giving to the laboring people the medical protection that they have a right to," she said. "The law says one member of the board shall be a physician or a sanitary engineer. This is mandatory. As the board was constituted, this law was disregarded. I believe Governor Walsh is absolutely single-minded in the matter.

"Certain health conditions which came before us emphasized the need of a medical man on the board. When the Governor learned of these things, it brought the whole matter to a head.

"The board is not legally constituted and it is better to start all over again. He is perfectly honest in his reorganization plan. I was placed on the board purely because the need was felt of a woman member as conditions as to the health of women and children workers might arise in the course of the work. I stuck to my job. I have not gone into the details of the office appointments and wrangles.

"When the appointment of a deputy came up, I thought it would be a doctor because frequently matters were before us which showed the great need of expert medical advice and experience. When I learned a doctor was not to be appointed, I went to the Governor and told him of it, and went before the Council and opposed the appointment on the ground that no one should be confirmed who was not a medical man.

"I have no criticism to make of the Governor. His action was proper."

Physician Gives Recipe for Gray Hair

A Well-Known Physician and Author Gives Simple Home Recipe That Will Darken Gray Hair.

Dr. Stanton Burroughs, the well-known physician and author, recently made the following statement: "Gray hair can be easily darkened by the following simple recipe, which you can mix at home: To 7 ozs. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. bay rum and 1 oz. glycerine. Apply it to the hair every other day until the desired shade is obtained. It not only is an excellent hair darkener, but it the same time removes dandruff and other ills of the scalp. I use it myself and have no hesitancy in recommending it to my patients. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost."—Adv.

A NATIVE HUT

On page 280 in "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose" is depicted a typical native hut, the primitive mode of living being fully described in the text; but these huts are fast giving way to modern homes, thus showing that the spirit of progress has taken hold of the inhabitants of the Canal Zone.

In the Procession

The native Panamanian woke up to find something better than the old hut of bamboo and clay thatched with palmetto; he saw the procession of progress; he joined the throng—and the story of his advancement runs its course throughout this interesting narrative.

OPERA COMPANY TRIP TO PARIS BIG BOOST FOR BOSTON AND PORT

One of the most extraordinary demonstrations in the recent history of Boston is being planned to accompany the departure, two weeks hence, of the Boston Opera Company upon the Red Star liner Lapland.

Not only is the Lapland the largest steamer which has yet come to this port, but the visit of the Boston Opera to Paris is considered by the Boston boomsters to be one of the most wonderful advertising propositions for the city of Boston that has yet been devised.

A million dollars expended in publicity would not do as much for Boston as the visit of the Opera Company to the home of opera in Europe, to show what wonderful strides grand opera has made in the New World.

As Secretary James A. McKibben of the Boston Chamber of Commerce puts it: "A city which can support an opera company of the calibre of the Boston Opera must be great and wealthy and worthy of the attention of capitalists and trade the world over. No better commendation of the character of our opera company could be made than the fact that it has been selected to give a long season of opera in Paris."

The demonstration will be in the hands of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Boston City Club, the Real Estate Exchange, the Port Directors, the Mayor and Governor, many members of the State and city government, the officers of the Boston City Club, which has always strongly backed the Opera Company, officers of the Chamber and prominent citizens generally will attend the sailing of the Lapland.

PLAN BIG SEND OFF.

The exact arrangements have not yet been perfected, but it is probable there will be music, speeches by city and State officials, and elaborate ceremonies.

The Boston Opera House orchestra, seventy-five strong, which is not accompanying the singers because of French union regulations, is considering volunteering its services for the send off, and the great chorus of 125 voices, which is the proudest boast of the Boston Opera, will undoubtedly give a musical program.

The company which will sail on the Lapland will include Director Russell, his chorus of 125, his executive staff, his stage managers, property men, and a large number of his principal singers, although some of his greatest artists will join him in Paris later.

Down in the hold will be stored nearly half a million dollars' worth of scenery, representing most of the wonderful productions made at the Boston Opera House during the last five years.

The costumes, properties and other appurtenances of an opera company will also go out on the Lapland.

The great Red Star boat was selected for the voyage because she sails direct to the continent and will land the Boston passengers at a French port. She comes around from New York especially to take the Boston Opera Company, and because the management of the company insisted that they must sail from Boston, thus earning the gratitude of all who wish to boom the port.

BANCROFT PRAISES IDEA.

General Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Port Directors, declared in giving his support to the plan for a demonstration:

"There is no doubt whatever that the enterprise of the Opera Company in going to Europe will have a splendid effect in the way of publicity for Boston. The port of Boston needs all the publicity it can get and is especially grateful for this opportunity to show the world that the city is so great and rich and powerful that one of the finest opera companies can make its home here.

"The conduct of the Boston Opera in demanding that the steamship companies furnish a ship to carry them direct from Boston to the coast of France deserves the thanks of the Port Directors and all who have the development of the port at heart. It is directly due to the Boston Opera Company that we are to be visited by the Lapland, one of the largest and finest ships in the world.

"I am heartily in favor of the biggest kind of a demonstration. If the other industries of Boston were as enterprising and aggressive as the Boston Opera we would not need any boom Boston campaign."

A. L. Winship, civic secretary of the Boston City Club, declared:

"You can be sure that this organization will be heart and soul in any proposition to show in what esteem we hold the Boston Opera Company. During the season we work hard for the opera and we will cut the house entirely one night each year to members of the club. We believe that the Boston Opera is a magnificent institution and wherever it goes it will reflect credit upon the city. The officers and the board of governors and hundreds of the members of the club will go to the pier to demonstrate our good-will and wish the company godspeed."

Secretary McKibben is arranging to have the Chamber of Commerce well represented and President John J. Martin has agreed that the Real Estate Exchange will take a hand.

FIGHT HOUSE PLAN TO KILL CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION PETITION

Debate is resumed this afternoon in the House on the report of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, "leave to withdraw" on the petition for the calling of a constitutional convention.

* * *

* * *

The Committee on Constitutional Amendments had forty-one petitions before it this year, as recently as before approached. The committee were carefully picked—very carefully picked—especially on the House side. They had to "let out" the Suffrage amendment, for once, and, rumor has it, they will also report favorably the submitting of an amendment prohibiting the appropriation of public funds for sectarian" purposes.

* * *

The program is supposed to be that everything else on the list will be given "leave to withdraw," a supposition which strengthens the position of those who say that there has come for the calling of a constitutional convention.

* * *

While Democrats and Progressives are pledged by their party platforms to the support of the constitutional convention proposition, the measure is not unlikely to attract the votes of those Republicans who believe in the rule of the people.

* * *

* * *

"The important changes suggested in my bill," Mr. Cox says, "are the elimination of party designations in the selection of delegates to the convention and an increase in the size of the convention from 240 (equal to the number of Representatives) to 250, the size of the Legislature as a whole.

* * *

"My purpose is the picking of the ablest men in Massachusetts, regardless of party, to sit in this convention. I would enter the names at the primary without party label and allow the first two to go upon the ballot on election day, still without party designation. The winner here would be elected a delegate to the convention.

* * *

"If we are going to have a constitutional convention we should see to it that it will be a gathering to be remembered for a century as an assembly of the leading Massachusetts men of our time."

* * *

Representative Twohig of South Boston, a first year member, distinguished himself yesterday in his speech against the case of those who say the time has come for a convention.

* * *

The grand bouncing of the State Board of Labor and Industries calls for little comment.

* * *

Convinced that the Board, "as constituted," did not have and was not likely to have the confidence of the people interested, the Governor asked for the resignation of Chairman James A. Lowell or Professor James W. Crook.

* * *

The board being without a "physician or sanitary engineer," Governor Walsh was within his rights in demanding that one of the two gentlemen who failed to meet the specific requirements of the law should "step aside."

* * *

Neither Chairman Lowell nor Professor Crook being inclined to "step," the only way was Walsh's.

* * *

The incident will perhaps be regarded as closed. There comes, however, a question regarding the necessity for bringing in all the "reasons" suggested by the Governor's statement to the press:

(1) That the Board was not properly organized, not having a "physician or sanitary engineer" among its members, (2) keeping a man in its employ contrary to civil service rules and regulations; (3) appearance of the chairman as the petitioner for legislation likely to break down the civil service; (4) lack of harmony.

* * *

With four reasons to talk about, the stand pat group will take care to steer away from the main issue—the faulty constitution of this board at the beginning—and violently discuss the three others.

* * *

Chairman Lowell, able attorney and splendid citizen though he is, found it extremely difficult to get away from Reason No. 1. Remembering that the speaker is one of the most successful lawyers in Boston, listen to this:

* * *

"The first reason given by the Governor is that the board was not constituted as required by law, because it did not contain in its membership a physician or sanitary engineer. THIS IS PURELY A TECHNICAL POINT; THE REAL QUESTION, SO FAR AS THE PUBLIC IS CONCERNED, IS WHETHER THE BOARD IS EFFICIENTLY PERFORMING THE WORK ASSIGNED TO IT."

* * *

* * *

"One of the principal purposes for the establishment of this board was to enforce those laws which fixed the relationship between the employer and the employe in the industries of the Commonwealth. Many of these laws have been passed by the Legislature with the chief object in view of producing every safeguard to preserve and protect the HEALTH of men, women and children employes. In my judgment the absence of a physician or sanitary engineer from this board is practically a violation of the statute creating it but is also an evasion of the spirit as well as the letter of the whole statute."

* * *

Here was the gist of the matter. The quarrels of Chairman Lowell and the Civil Service Commission, and the failure of the five board members to serve together in harmony, are side issues which may befog the main proposition.

Will the Governor reappoint some of the five?

His statement makes it plain that such is at least his present purpose.

The Supreme Judicial Court will now be asked whether the Act of 1912, giving the Adjutant-General a five-year tenure of office, is "constitutional."

Executive Council has authorized the Governor to pass the question along to the learned justices.

It is well known that all the Governors down to Walsh's time had the privilege of picking their Adjutant-Generals. The constitution makes the Governor commander-in-chief. The Adjutant-General, his "military private secretary," is the man on the job.

Bills repealing the Act of 1912 have been heard this year and today are being considered in executive session by the Committee on Military Affairs.

If one can believe corridor gossip, this committee has changed front on the matter forty-eleven times. Today's report is that the committee is with the Governor and will report the bill he desires.

Meanwhile the Supreme Court will clear up the situation by telling us whether the "Pearson" bill of 1912 has a constitutional leg to stand upon.

The puzzle in the constitution is presented by Article X, wherein it is said:

"The commanding officers of regiments shall appoint their adjutants and quartermasters; the brigade majors their brigade-majors; and the major-generals their aides; AND THE GOVERNOR SHALL APPOINT THE ADJUTANT-GENERAL."

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES L. TWOHIG, young Boston Democrat, who gave a good account of himself in the House, urging a Constitutional Convention.

DEADLY MENACE OF NEGLECTED COLDS

They Lead to Pneumonia or Serious Throat and Lung Troubles.

Doctors know that a great many serious throat and lung troubles, and fatal cases of pneumonia develop from neglected colds so common at this season. Treat your cold promptly by taking Father John's Medicine, which gives new strength to ward off threatening disease because it is pure and wholesome nourishment for those who are weakened and run down. Remember that Father John's Medicine is free from alcohol or dangerous drugs and therefore is a safe family medicine, fine for children as well as older people.

Simple Home Treatment for Objectionable Hairs

Toilet Talks

Here is a toilet help you should remember, because it may at some time be the means of saving you from embarrassment: To quickly and painlessly remove hair or fuzz from chin, lip or cheek, apply a thick paste made by mixing together powdered delatone and water. Let this remain on the hairy surface about 2½ minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and lo! the hairs have vanished. This treatment is entirely harmless, but caution should be used to see that you get delatone.

HOPPER SCORES AS "DEADEYE" IN "PINAFORE"

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

They may have worn queer clothes in the eighties, and had ideas about various things that we consider old-fashioned, but they knew how to write comic operas.

If you doubt it, go to see "Pinafore" at the Shubert. After seeing "Pinafore" by a first class company, one wonders at the impudence of the amateurs who have been massacring this masterpiece for more than a generation.

Sullivan was one of the most amazing composers of melody who ever lived. His sparkling tunes and dainty orchestration, however, was equalled by the brilliance of Gilbert, his librettist. No such combination is ever likely to happen again, worse luck.

Yesterday afternoon De Wolf Hopper appeared in his famous characterization of Dick Deadeye, and extracted a maximum of fun from this small part. It was amusing to see Hopper occupying a reserved seat in the chorus most of the time because the opera did not require him. Few stars would be willing to play such a comparatively unimportant role and few could do said role so effectively.

Arthur Cunningham as Sir Joseph Porter is a comedian of the traditional Gilbertian manner. His diction is splendid and he rattles off the patter songs with accuracy. Carl C. Thomas sings very well as Captain Corcoran, and Arthur Aldridge is a surprisingly good tenor for light opera. Miss Alice Brady sings prettily and with better tone than expression, but she has a very attractive personality, as has Gladys Caldwell.

The part of Little Buttercup does not fit Sara Edwards. It requires quite a different type from Miss Edwards, who sings very well. Herbert Waterous, an old Savage opera favorite, sang "He Is an Englishman" with fine effect. The scenery was very attractive.

Car Barn Bandit Free After 16-Year Term

PROVIDENCE, March 12.—Arthur G. Webster, who has served sixteen years of a twenty-five-year sentence in connection with the Portsmouth car barn robbery, has been pardoned on Governor Pothier's recommendation. A report on Webster's record in State prison showed he had been punished sixty-nine times for infractions of rules and for seven years had been isolated.

By using a white clay pipe as a "revolver," Walter Rector charged with theft, drove back a New York crowd repeatedly, but was later captured by a policeman.

An Irish jaunting car carrying four pretty girls dressed all in green and wearing green wigs will form part of St. Patrick's parade in New York city.

The tango will produce big hipped women and slant shoulders, according to Dr. Maude Dunn, a fashion expert of Philadelphia.

Summoned for not attending school, Gertrude Schwatz, twelve, of New York, told the court that the class room seats are too small. She weighs 155 pounds.

Mrs. Matilda of Yonkers obtained a court order to make her husband love her and to devote his attentions to her for four days.

6 Months for Slashing of "Rokeby Venus"

LONDON, March 12.—A sentence of six months was today imposed upon Mary Richardson, the militant suffragette, for slashing the famous art masterpiece, "Rokeby Venus," by Velasquez, in the National Gallery on Tuesday. The lightness of the sentence was a surprise, but in view of leniency shown other women prisoners within the past few days, it indicates that the courts have adopted a milder attitude toward the militants.

The prisoner was defiant in court, defending herself and declaiming against the arrest of her leader, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

Scottish suffragettes made a raid on government buildings in Glasgow today in retaliation for the arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst. They succeeded in smashing a number of windows in a military recruiting office, but were driven off by the police.

The Glasgow raiders were led by the wife of a clergyman who was captured and sentenced to a jail term. The arson squad also fired a big untenanted mansion at Stewarton, twenty miles north of Ayr.

Ralph W. Angler of No. 322 Franklin street, Newton, was today appointed to the Newton Playground Commission for three years, succeeding Charles E. Gibson.

Batavia Tires a Feature of Show

While the visitors to the show are paying a great deal of attention to the various models exhibited, they are not by any means overlooking the tires on display. The Batavia tire is one which is attracting attention at the show. The high-grade materials that go into its construction is causing a great deal of favorable comment. The regular depressions in the Batavia tread of this non-skid tire form a suction which grips the road and keeps the car from skidding.

The Weidely Motor

Have You Missed the Real Sensation at the Show?

The Premier Six Roadster—with the Weidely Motor

The "Greyhound" of Six Cylinder Motors

Have you seen the motor with the valves in the head, and the cam-shaft operating directly over them?

The motor without rocker-arms, push-rods and rollers—the six-cylinder motor with the fewest parts?

Have you seen this small motor with greater power and speed than other six-cylinder motors of larger size?

Do you know that this "six" travels farther on a gallon of gasoline than FOUR-cylinder motors of equally rated power?

Advancement Without Disturbing Basic Principles

The difference in its efficiency is simply the difference between what "we get and what the other fellow wastes."

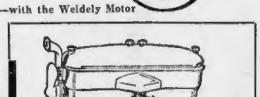
Come See It

Come see the Premier—the only car in America with the Weidely Motor. Note the symmetrical body lines—harmony and balance—all in keeping with the remarkable simplicity and "up-to-dateness" of the power plant.

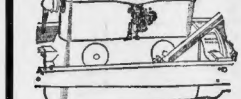
Clean motor appearance is not obtained by sideplate coverings, but by the elimination of unnecessary parts. The Premier Six with the Weidely Motor is considered the finest example of six construction in America. It was the sensation at the New York and Chicago Shows.

The Premier is one car in the Boston Show which will make worth while your visit.

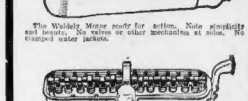
The Weidely Motor ready for action. Note simplicity and beauty. No valves or other mechanism at sides. No cramped water jackets.



Perfect Lubrication of Valve Mechanism



View of Weidely Motor with cap removed. Note the utter simplicity—valves directly in head, cam-shaft directly above. Silent and accessible.



The ordinary engine with side plates removed. Note the multiplicity of parts.

NEWS NOTES AND GOSSIP OF BOSTON'S GREATEST AUTOMOBILE SHOW

By J. C. KERRISON.

There is no question but what a great impetus has been given the retail sales of motor vehicles by the automobile show now being held in Mechanics Building. More buyers are visiting the show these days than was anticipated and all the exhibitors are announcing great sales.

The motor show always seems to contain some particularly attractive feature to the individual. There seems to be something which appeals to everyone and the throngs which crowd the show are interested and are real, live prospects.

A noticeable departure from previous years is to be found in the attendance during the morning hours, which is larger than heretofore, and what is more to the point, is a buying crowd. In the next three days it is assumed purchases of cars will reach a record point.

One of the leading dealers said today there is every indication of a shortage of cars within the next two months. He felt a great many people who are delaying the ordering of their motor vehicle will be disappointed when they find the demand for these cars has been so great they will be unable to secure one until the middle of the Summer.

"Probably nothing we have done in the introduction of a new element into our sales or manufacturing practice has caused so much comment, some of it of a critical nature, as the change of the name of our car this season from Rambler or Cross Country to Jeffery," said C. R. Rockwell. "I think it is generally conceded that no better name can be found for any product than that of its manufacturer."

W. B. Doan, distributor of the Keeton and Car-Nation cars in this territory, is meeting with considerable success in the sale of these two models. The Car-Nation, strictly speaking, is not a cycle car, but a small car built on the same plan as the larger models.

For some time there has been a growing enthusiasm for American tires on the other side of the world and in South American countries, and that enthusiasm has been steadily increasing, especially since Goux, in his big French car, won the 500-mile race on the Indianapolis Speedway last Summer on Firestone tires.

"This year's shows have, perhaps, been more impressive to one who has been for many years actively interested in the building of cars than any held heretofore," says H. E. Olds, president of the Reo Motor Company.

Two creations, a streamline roadster and an electrically-lighted and started five-passenger touring car, are being exhibited by the Empire Automobile Company in the basement of Mechanics Building. The agency for this car in this territory has been taken over by Frank L. Roberts and Harvey Wheeler will distribute this line throughout New England.

Judging by the confidence of one dealer, Ralph Ketchum of the Kissel Kar, final reports will show that Boston held its own in volume of sales with New York and Chicago.

Gray & Davis have extended a cordial invitation to all visitors to the Automobile Show to come to the new factory on the Charles River Park way to inspect the new plant and the actual production of starting-lighting systems.

"An unusual tribute is being paid Benjamin Briscoe, head of our company," said Horace De Lisser, vice-president and general manager of the Briscoe Motor Company. "Hundreds of dealers throughout the country formerly associated with Mr. Briscoe's undertakings are rallying to his standard and seeking territory in which to handle his new car."

Included in the Moline-Knight exhibit is a dissected sleeve valve motor which is attracting extraordinary attention.

The Mora Cyclecar, which is being exhibited at the show by M. F. Chase, the New England distributor of the Stutz car, is one of the popular models and is attracting a lot of attention.

Harry Ford, president of the Saxon Company, was decidedly pleased when told the Whitten-Gilmore Company, local distributors of the Saxon, were insistent upon increasing their Saxon allotment 100 per cent. Mr. Ford said the planning will turn out 12,000 cars this year.

Vice-President and General Manager E. R. Benson of the Studebaker Corporation, who is visiting the show, is an old Boston boy, born and raised here.

The Paige Motor Company of New England tendered to the Paige dealers throughout New England a luncheon at a Back Bay hotel. H. R. and F. L. Jewett of the home office were present and praised the dealers who preach Paige reliability and Paige efficiency.

General Manager E. A. Emlee and Vice-President Mortimer Mead of the Chandler Motor Car Company are visiting the show. Mr. Emlee says the great success the Chandler is meeting with in New England is but a duplication of their experiences throughout the country.

No exhibit in the show is attracting any greater attention than that of the Pierce cars presided over by J. W. Maguire.

Henry Hower, the blond-haired young man from the Stearns plant at Cleveland, spends most of his time at the J. H. MacAlman booth, extolling the virtues of the Knight sleeve valve motor.

The Knox exhibit, over which Frank Crockett is presiding, occupies the same position on the floor of Mechanics Building that it did in the first year that this hall was used for motor show purposes.

Sales Manager Churchill of the Winton Car Company brought news of business activity throughout the country. He was pleased to find that the amount of business already secured by Manager Hinchcliffe beats all previous records.

A. E. Kenney, New England distributor for the Mercury cyclecar, declared: "The demand is taxing our output and the general public seems to have grasped the ideas that we intended our little Mercury car to convey. This has surely been a real show."

A. G. Partridge, assistant sales manager of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, will spend several days in Boston co-operating with Mr. Glenn, the Boston manager, in perfecting plans for Spring activities throughout New England.

J. P. Gage, special representative for the Trumbull car, a former athlete of the Boston English High School, is greatly pleased with the results his car has shown at the show up to date.

E. R. Benson, vice-president of the Studebaker Corporation and director of sales, will remain until Saturday afternoon.

C. J. Fischer of Cambridge, local agent for the LaVigne cyclecar, says the show has been a record-breaker for him. J. F. LaVigne, president of the company, will arrive from the West today and Frank Witt, general sales manager, will also be in attendance the remainder of the week.

H. Ross Maddocks is an enthusiastic booster of the cyclecar, and is constantly on the job in the basement with his Twombly understudy as his pet hobby.

R. G. Neizbor, sales manager for the Humpobile Company, is here.

"The 'repeater,' who buys the same car year after year, is the best friend an automobile manufacturer can have," said John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Company, Toledo.

Traversing 2,563 miles of the streets and highways of Pittsburgh and the hilly surrounding country for a radius of several score miles in a non-motor-stop sealed Bonnet reliability test, a 1914 Mitchell "Six" car his set an enviable record.

R. P. Blake, who takes special pride in the 1914 cyclecar, is an optimist of the first water. "We have convinced hundreds of the possibilities of the cyclecar," he says.

W. F. McGill, representative in the Western district of the International Cyclecar Company says: "My Economy car has made a bigger hit than I ever expected and my associates, C. A. Folger and Victor Hudon, report the most favorable results."

A meeting of the majority of the cyclecar dealers exhibiting at the show was held at a Back Bay Hotel. A temporary organization was formed, with C. G. Percival as chairman. R. F. Kelsey, president of the National Cyclecar Association, and F. Ed. Spooner, president of the Detroit Cyclecar Club, addressed the meeting on the advisability of organization, after which the Cyclecar Club of New England was organized with the following officers: E. P. Blake, president; H. Ross Maddocks, first vice-president; C. J. Fisher, second vice-president; C. F. Roberts, secretary; A. E. Kenney, treasurer. The following were elected directors: F. J. Tyler, J. J. Richards, H. C. Goss, F. S. Corlew and Joseph E. Green.

Charles S. Henshaw, manager for J. J. Kingsley, made an announcement at the show that the dare-devil driver will attempt to make the trip from coast to coast over the Lincoln Highway in thirty days. He is going to use an automobile and not an airship.

WHITE CARS BUILT FOR LONG SERVICE, NOT FOR TRADING

Asserting that too many motor cars are built to be traded, rather than to give permanent service, and characterizing the custom of "annual trades" as unnecessary and unfair to motorists, Walter C. White, who is now in attendance at the automobile show in Mechanics Building, has built a seven-passenger car which he plainly advising purchasers to buy high-grade cars and then keep them.

"The White Company has always been opposed to frequent trades," said Mr. White, "because it is not necessary for owners to buy new cars every year or so in order to be up-to-date. This company, so far as its own product is concerned, has no second-hand problem. Our owners seldom trade their cars.

"The bodies of White cars are proper in outline, dignified and conservative. Because they are never extreme, they are always in style. They are built to last, and are not designed to make the owner feel obliged, for mere appearance sake, to purchase a new car every year. We are building cars for keeps, not for trades. Trading is distinctly unfair to the owner and that, is why we say to the motorists, 'Keep Your Car.'"

WEIDELY MOTOR ON THE PREMIER INSURES HIGHEST EFFICIENCY

For the modern small bore and stroke motor the ultra-efficient overhead valves have great advantages, and can be made very quiet as well. This type of valve, driven by an overhead cam shaft, can be enclosed and run in oil, insuring perfect lubrication and absence of clicking, and the cams can act directly on the valve stems. The valves need not be large, for a flat valve in this small size will hold the gas, and can be made self-cleaning.

Before the adoption of the six-cylinder Weidely motor by the Premier Motor Manufacturing Company shown in New England for the first time at the automobile show at Mechanics Building, there was no car on the market having overhead valves and cam shafts which did not employ cumbersome rocker arms to together the advantages of being flexible, silent and powerful, with extreme efficiency and low cost of fuel upkeep. Its silence has been obtained by the placing of both intake and exhaust valves directly over the cylinders, their motion being imparted to them by means of a cam shaft driven by a single vertical shaft, thus eliminating over 40 per cent of unnecessary parts.

ROBERT KAYSER IS BACK, ENTHUSIASTIC OVER THE VELIE CAR

Hurrying from San Francisco to be present at the opening of the new Velie salesroom, garage and service station under the management of Roberts Garage, Ltd., Robert Kayser stepped off the Twentieth Century Limited from Chicago with a broad and expansive smile.

"Glad to be back," said Bob, who is well known among Boston motor enthusiasts as a former member of the Velie branch.

"And I've got a great bunch to work with," he continued. "George Burke, who has been a long time connected with Boston motordom, is going to be manager of the garage and service end, and I don't know of a better man anywhere and I have seen some in the past few years.

"I've been selling Velie cars in Chicago and in San Francisco since I left Boston, and they are ideal for both places, but they are still better for New England and that is why I came back.

"The new cars are wonders. I stopped off at the factory at Moline, on the way here and saw the new stream line light car in process of building. It sure was a happy sight."

Manager Braddeld, driving up in a big, yellow Velie racebout, was the interruption that caused Kayser to stop his dissertation.

HEART INTEREST IN PANAMA STORIES

Of course you would like to take a trip to Panama and see the mighty works of the great Canal, but it would require much time and money. The AMERICAN offers a better way to make the trip. Clip the Panama certificate printed elsewhere in this issue and learn how you may come into immediate possession of "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Story," a book that not only tells the complete story of the Canal, but also sets forth a wealth of interesting stories concerning the country and the people.

Practically all of the information you would get by taking a trip to Panama would be that which you would get through the sense of sight. This new illustrated book introduces scenes far removed from the usual path of the tourist. It tells you of the queer natives that eat lizards; of the dress and customs of the inhabitants of the Zone; of the peculiar flowers of the jungle; of the fortifications, taxes, commerce, diplomacy and politics of the Canal district.

This book is magnificently illustrated with more than six hundred rare pictures, many in beautiful colors and reproduced in full page. The pictures themselves are equal to a trip to Panama. They gladden the eye and enrich the mind.

The AMERICAN wants every one of its readers to have a copy of this beautiful new illustrated book, and with that end in view a certificate is printed daily in these columns, six of which enable the bearer to get it when accompanied by the small expense amount which covers the actual cost of the various expense items of distribution. Look for the certificate and clip it today.

SOAP ON HAIR CAUSES DANDRUFF, SCALP GETS DRY, HAIR FALLS OUT

Girls! Get a 25-cent bottle and try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse."

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates and invigorates scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

Velie

Motor Cars — Motor Trucks

Three Days Left—Dealers, Act Now!

BY the end of the week 80% of the desirable territory in New England will be contracted for by Velie dealers. There is no time to be lost. Every day sees big contracts closed. Delay may mean the loss of the line to you. Retail orders from both open and closed territory are greater than ever before. Buyers have caught the Velie spirit—every day you wait may mean the loss of a sale to you.

And the big feature car—the talk of owners and the talk of dealers—is the new Velie.

Sensational Stream Line Body—Just Out

And shown for the first time at the Boston Show. It's the real thing—the biggest car for $1,500 that has ever been shown. With electric lighting, electric starting, European body, one-man top and every piece of equipment that the owner can ask for.

We are wiring orders every day for immediate delivery of this new car to dealers, who demand it for a demonstrator.

Every live dealer knows that the man who made money last year was the man who sold the Velie, and with the season just starting

200% Greater Business Already

Is in sight for delivery within the next two months. If you want to ride with us, get in your application now. There is no comparison between the Velie and any other car at anywhere near the price. This is being demonstrated every day to hundreds of prospects and to scores of dealers.

The Six that popularized Light Weight is the new Velie "6-50," and it is still hundreds of pounds lighter than any other Six of the same size and power. The Most Famous Big Four is the Velie "4-45," and we are proving its superiority over any other in daily demonstrations.

Back of these remarkable cars is the strongest foundation for your success, and that is

Unquestioned Financial Stability

For the Velie Company has the money to build the right kind of a car and to back up dealers to the limit. Look this up for yourself—any Banker, any Financial Agency, will give you the figures. And you can readily see what they mean. They mean permanency, fair dealings and satisfaction. They mean success to you.

Wire at Our Expense—Now

We don't want you to be one of the dealers who was caught napping, so we are giving you the chance to cinch the line for your territory. Wire now at our expense. Just call up the nearest telegraph office and let us know when you will be in. We will be ready for you— will make any test you ask—and will give you a complete plan of how we will work with you in your territory.

RHUMASALTS IS FINE FOR TORPID LIVER

Learn How to Secure Quick, Safe Relief

The liver is the largest gland in the body, weighing nearly four pounds. Its main purpose is to aid digestion and make glycogen for the blood. So it is important to keep it working right.

If your liver is lazy and your kidneys throb with a dull ache, you need the scientifically blended and chemically pure carbonated lithia drink called Rhumasalts.

Lame back, shooting pains, tired feeling, dizziness, and rheumatism simply mean that your liver and kidneys are clogged with impurities, and that poisonous uric acid is retarding their work of aiding the digestive functions and filtering the blood. Flush your liver and kidneys and get them working right by taking Rhumasalts in water for a few mornings.

Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness and bladder disorders come from torpid liver and sluggish kidneys. Take Rhumasalts. This delightful effervescent lithia drink helps the weakened kidneys and brings out the stomach, and eliminates the toxins and poisons, and leaves the intestinal canal clean and sweet.

It is uric acid solvent as well as saline laxative. Acts quickly without griping or nausea.

The next time your liver and kidneys bother you, or your head aches, ask your druggist for a bottle of Rhumasalts. It comes in 50c, 90c and $1.50 bottles. If he hasn't the genuine Rhumasalts, send the price to the Rhumasalts Company, Dept. 143, Minneapolis, Minn., for a bottle, or go to your druggist for Valuable book free. Sold by all Riker-Jaynes and other leading drug stores. (5)

Stories about Stage Folk

Wilton Lackaye's Wit.

WILTON LACKAYE'S wit is proverbial. He is a brilliant raconteur and a master of repartee. Some of his remarks are biting and cynical, but always clever. There are some envious ones, who say this actor spends his time thinking up bright remarks and reserving them for the proper moment; if this is the case, his system of mental card index is wonderful, for he is never found short of an answer just when it is due. His remark to Nat Goodwin in the cafe of the Lambs, just after one of his many matrimonial ventures, "Say, Nat, why don't you ever invite me to one of your weddings?" has been repeated wherever actors congregate.

* * *

DURING rehearsals of "Fine Feathers" Eugene Walter, the author, suggested to Lackaye a change in the reading of one of his lines.

"As author of this play," said Walter, I am supposed to know the construction to be placed on my lines."

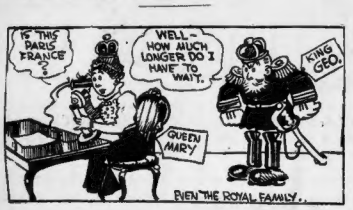
"Very well," responded Lackaye, "but I must insist on a line being inserted in the program that this is the idea of the playwright—not the actor."

* * *

THE stage manager of "Fine Feathers" has been experiencing considerable difficulty in apportioning the dressing rooms among the many stars of the company, and asked Lackaye for some advice. "Better consult an astrologer," the actor replied.

* * *

"HAVE you ever interviewed me before?" Lackaye asked of a newspaper writer who called at his hotel. "No," was the reply. "I am glad of that. I don't like to be interviewed by the same person twice. my repartee might become repertoire."



Tragedy of a Musical Comedy.

By ADDISON BURKHARDT.
AUTHOR OF "THE MERRY GAMBOL"

Nobody knew how it happened. But the librettist-to-be knew an usher. The usher had a pair of passes for a revival of "The Mikado." The usher gave the passes to his friend, unconscious of the dire results that were to follow.

The librettist-to-be met another friend, who played ragtime. The L. T. B. asked the ragtime player to help him see "The Mikado." The latter helped. The audience who sat around them heard the strains of an anvil chorus mingling with "Three Little Maids From School" and "My Object All Sublime." The anvil chorus was their first attempt at collaboration. This was the motif:

Composer: "There isn't a melody in it that has a thing on that melold of mine, 'Tillie, My Tango Queen.' "

Librettist: "And as for the book, it sounds like an obituary notice put to music. Lamp these kimonos! There isn't a pair of tights in the show. What they want is atmosphere. Have a scene in a cafe—local color—with real booze. They ought to book St. Petersburg with this Mikado thing and the troupe would play Siberia for a run."

Unique Criticisms.

Frank Wilstach, whose love of the classics has prompted him to make a collection of unique dramatic criticisms, has recently gathered in the following gems:

Henry Watterson once criticised a performance of "Hamlet" for his paper, the Louisville Courier Journal, thusly:

"'Hamlet' at the Macauley Opera House last night. 'My God,' said the Woodcock, and it flew away."

There was also that Denver writer, unknown to fame, who wrote:

"Mr. Portius played 'Hamlet' at the Tabor Grand last night, and played it hard till 12 o'clock."

Weber Too Short.

Joe Weber and Lew Fields were talking of the time when they were clowns with a circus. "Honestly," said Fields, "I believe that job was the hardest in the world. We helped set up the tent, helped the cook, helped feed the animals, marched in the parade, put on a show in the animal tent, clowned in the big top and helped strike the tent. We did everything except help count the money—"

Mr. Weber was protesting. "I didn't help feed the animals," he interrupted. "Law did that. I was too short to reach the elephant."

Value of Imagination

Two motorists arrived late one night at the village inn, engaged a room, and went straight to bed.

After the light had been out about half an hour they discovered that the room was so stuffy that neither of them could sleep.

"Where are the matches?" growled Cuthbert.

"There aren't any!" groaned Clarence.

"Well, I'm going to open the window, anyhow. So here goes!"

Barking his shins as he went, the courageous Cuthbert at last reached his goal, and threw open the window—

"Can't open the rotten thing now I've got here!" he panted.

"Break it, then!" grunted Clarence the reckless.

Crash!

The tinkling sound of falling glass filled the room, as Cuthbert hit the window with his boot.

"That's better!" he said, as he once more pulled the clothes over his head.

"Better!" answered Clarence. "A fellow can't sleep without proper ventilation!"

When they wakened next morning they were surprised to find the window untouched, but the glass door of a big bookcase smashed to pieces.

The Woman Thou Gavest Me

HALL CAINE'S GREATEST STORY

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL
FOURTH PART
I FALL IN LOVE

Copyright, 1913, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Hearst Magazine, Canada, Ltd. Copyright in Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. S. Ballantine Company.

That was the end of everything. It came upon me like a torrent and swept all my scruples away.

Such was the purity of the Church—threatening me with its censures for wishing to follow the purest dictates of my heart, yet taking money from a woman like Alma, who was bribing it to be blind to her misconduct and to cover her with its good-will!

My husband too—his infidelities were flagrant and notorious, yet the Church, through its minister, was flattering his vanity and condoning his offences!

He was coming back to me, too—this adulterous husband, and when he came the Church would require that I should keep "true faith" with him, whatever his conduct, and deny myself the pure love that was now awake within me.

But no, no, no! Never again! It would be a living death. Accursed be the power that could doom a woman to a living death!

TO MARTIN

Perhaps I was no longer sane—morally sane—and if so God and the Church will forgive me. But seeing that neither the Church nor the Law could liberate me from this bond which I did not make, that both were shielding the evil man and tolerating the bad woman, my whole soul rose in revolt.

I told myself now that to leave my husband and go to Martin would be to escape from shame to honor.

I saw Martin's despairing face again as I had seen it at the moment of our parting, and my brain rang with his passionate words. "You are my wife. I am your real husband. We love each other. We shall continue to love each other. No matter where you are, or what they do with you, you are mine and always will be."

Something was crying out within me. "Love him! Tell him you love him. Now, now! He is going away. Tomorrow will be too late. Go to him. This will be your true marriage. The other was only legalized and sanctified prostitution."

I leapt up, and tearing the door open, I walked with strong steps across the corridor towards Martin's room.

My hair was down, my arms were bare in the ample sleeves of my dressing-gown, and my breast was as open as it had been on the balcony, but I thought nothing of all that.

I did not knock at Martin's door. I took hold of the handle and—he had a right. It turned of itself and the door opened.

My mind was in a whirl, black rings were circling round my eyes, but I heard my trembling, quivering, throbbing voice, as if it had been the voice of somebody else, saying:

"Martin, I am coming in."

Then my heart which had been beating violently seemed to stop. My limbs gave way. I was about to fall.

At the next moment strong arms were around me. I had no fear. But there was a roaring in my brain such as the ice makes when it is breaking up.

Oh, you good women, who are happy in the love that guards you, shields you, shelters you, wraps you round and keeps you pure and true, tread lightly over the prostrate body of your sister in her hour of trial and fierce temptation.

And you blessed and holy saints who kneel before the Mother of all Mothers, take the transgression of her guilty child to Him who—long ago in the house of the self-righteous Pharisee—said to the woman who was a sinner and yet loved much—the woman who had washed His feet with her tears and dried them with the hair of her head—"Thy sins are forgiven thee."

FIFTH PART
I BECOME A MOTHER
Seventieth Chapter

NEXT morning, at half-past eight, my Martin left me.

We were standing together in the boudoir between the table and the fire, which was burning briskly, for the sultry weather had gone in the night, and the Autumn air was keen, though the early sun was shining.

At the last moment he was unwilling to go, and it was as much as I could do to persuade him. Perhaps it is one of the mysteries which God alone can read that our positions seemed to have been reversed since the day before.

He was confused, agitated, and full of self reproaches, while I felt no fear and no remorse, but only an indescribable joy, as if a new and gracious life had suddenly dawned on me.

"I don't feel that I can leave England now," he said.

"You can and you must," I answered, and then I spoke of his expedition as a great work which it was impossible to put off.

"Somebody else must do it then," he said.

"Nobody else can, or should," I replied.

"But our lives are forever joined together now, and everything else must go by the board."

"Nothing shall go by the board for my sake, Martin. I refuse and forbid it."

Everything had been arranged, everything settled, great sums of money had been subscribed out of faith in him, and him only, and a large company was ready and waiting to sail under his command. He was the Man of Destiny, therefore nothing—nothing whatever—must keep him back.

"Then if I must go, you must go too," he said. "I mean you must go with me to London and wait there until I return."

"That is impossible," I answered.

The eyes of the world were on him now, and the heart of the world was with him. If I did what he desired it would reflect dishonor on his name, and he should not suffer for my sake under any circumstances.

"But think what may happen to you while I am away," he said.

"Nothing will happen while you are away, Martin."

"But how can you be so sure of the future when God alone knows what it is to be?"

"That God will provide for it," I said, and with that last answer he had to be satisfied.

"You must take a letter from me at all events," said Martin, and sitting at my desk he began to write one.

It is amusing to me now when I come to think of it that I could have been so confident of myself and so indifferent to consequences. But I was thinking of one thing only—that Martin must go on his great errand, finish his great work and win his great reward, without making my sacrifice for me.

THE LETTER.

After a few minutes he rose from the desk and handed me his letter.

"Here it is," he said. "If the worst comes to the worst you may find it of some use some day."

I took it and doubled it and continued to hold it in my hand.

"Aren't you going to look at it?" he said.

"No."

"Not even to see whom it is written to?"

"That is unnecessary."

I thought I knew it was written to my husband or my father, and it did not matter to me which, for I had determined not to use it.

"It is open—won't you see what it says?"

"That is unnecessary also."

I thought I knew that Martin had tried to take everything upon himself, and I was resolved that he should not do so.

He looked at me with that worshipful expression which, seen in the eyes of the man who loves her, makes a woman proud to be alive.

"I feel as if I want to kiss the hem of your dress, Mary," he said, and after that there was a moment of heavenly silence.

It was now half-past eight—the hour when the motor car had been ordered to take him to the town—and though I felt as if I could shed drops of my blood to keep back the finger of my cuckoo clock I pointed out and said it was time for him to go.

I think our parting was the most beautiful moment of all my life.

We were standing a little apart, for though I wanted to throw my arms about his neck at that last instant I would not allow myself to do so, because I knew that that would make it the harder for him to go.

BREATH CAME QUICK

I could see, too, that he was trying not to make it harder for me, so we stood in silence for a moment while my bosom heaved and his breath came quick.

Then he took my right hand in both of his hands and said:

"There is to be no bond between us now which can never be broken."

"Never," I answered.

"Whatever happens to either of us we belong to each other for ever."

"For ever and ever," I replied.

I felt his hands tighten at that, and after another moment of silence, he said:

"I may be a long time away, Mary."

"I can wait."

"Down there a man has to meet many dangers."

"You will come back. Providence will take care of you."

"I think it will. I feel I shall. But if I don't—

I knew what he was trying to say. A shadow seemed to pass between us.

My throat grew thick, and for a moment I could not speak. But then I heard myself say:

"Love is stronger than death; many waters cannot quench it."

His hands quivered, his whole body trembled, and I thought he was going to clasp me to his breast as before, but he only drew down my forehead with his hot hand and kissed it.

That was all, but a blinding mist seemed to pass before my eyes, and when it cleared the door of the room was open and my Martin was gone.

I heard his strong step on the stone flags of the hall—he was going out at the porch.

I heard the metallic clashing of the door of the automobile—he was already in the car.

I heard the throb of the motor and a rucking of the gravel of the path—he was moving away.

I heard the dying down of the engine and the soft roll of the rubber wheels—I was alone.

For some moments after that the world seemed empty and void. But the feeling passed, and when I recovered my strength I found Martin's letter in my moist left hand.

Then I knelt before the fire, and putting the letter into the flames I burnt it.

Chatter You Hear in Hotel Lobbies

That Boy Again!

There was great rejoicing in the Jones family. The eldest son had come home from abroad.

The first evening he was at home all the family were gathered round the blazing fire, listening to some of his adventures in lands beyond the seas. All eyes were on him, and he was thoroughly in his element.

But the most interested of them all was Tommy, the youngest member of the family. Tommy sat on his big brother's knee, listening with eyes and mouth wide open.

"Yes, it was a ticklish moment," the adventurer was saying. "I had just covered the bear with my rifle, when, to my horror, I saw a tiger creeping stealthily towards me through the long grass. I realized that I was on the horns of a dilemma."

Here he made a dramatic pause.

"Go on, Harry—go on!" burst out Tommy. "What did you do? Shoot the bear or the tiger or the dilemma?"

Didn't Wash.

A gentleman went into an animal store and told the proprietor that he wanted to buy a Dalmatian dog.

"Certainly, sir," said the assistant. "I've got the very thing."

In a quarter of an hour he brought out the animal; the customer paid the money and departed. Before his train time, however, a heavy shower fell.

"Look at him!" he cried. "You told me he was a Dalmation. Give me my money back. All his spots are washed off in the rain."

The proprietor apologized.

"It's all that stupid's fool's mistake."

He called to his assistant.

"James, did you sell this dog to this gentleman?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Don't you know an umbrella goes with this dog?"

Chivalry Underground.

As usual, the subway was crowded, and the customary number of passengers hung from the roof, attached to straps.

One of these, an elderly gentleman of generous proportions, had no sense of balance and contrived to step on the feet of most of the people in his immediate neighborhood.

At last a lady, who had been seated directly underneath this mass of suspended animation, rose and offered him her seat. He took it, breathing heavily.

"Thank you, madam—thank you!" he puffed, mopping his brow. "It is most kind and thoughtful of you."

"Sir, it was neither kindness nor thoughtfulness," she answered coldly. "It was self protection!"

The Precise Man.

"It looks like rain."

"I beg your pardon?"

"I say it looks like rain."

"What does?"

"The weather."

"The weather, my dear sir, is a condition. Rain is water in the act of falling from the clouds. It is impossible they should look alike."

"What I meant was that the sky looked like rain."

"The proprietor apologized.

"It's all that stupid's fool's mistake."

"Equally impossible. The sky is the blue vault above us—the seeming arch or dome that we call the heavens. It does not resemble falling watery in the least."

"Well, then, if you are so thunderingly particular, it looks as if it would rain."

"As if what would rain?"

"The weather, of course."

"The weather, as before stated, being a condition, cannot rain."

"The clouds then, confound you! I may not know as much about it as you do, but I've got enough sense to get in out of it, and you haven't," said the man, as he raised his umbrella and walked away in a huff.

A SPOILED LIFE.

CHAPTER I.

"The Road to Everywhere" struck the fashionable audiences of New York with something like the surprise a hothouse rose might feel when touched with woodland awe.

It was a drama of youth—a picture of young love in its glow, its glamour and enthusiasm, it seemed to have been written by some precocious boy of eighteen—a boy in love. But there were in it sudden pitfalls of truth (with which, of course, love has nothing to do) and unexpected heights of view over the concourse of all life that which made one certain it was not the work of any boy.

The first night audience received it with volcanic applause. There was magic in the simple and yet subtle picture of the love-moment in the heart of youth, and the so depressingly instructive vice plays of a heavy season, it was refreshing, stimulating, aweet.

"But who wrote it—Miss Wierum, who DID write it? You ought to tell us, it's your out). He should have credit for so fine a thing," said one of the newspaper critics who joined the congratulatory crowd in the dressing room of Hilda Wierum after the performance.

"But I know as little as you," she answered with obvious frankness as the call boy gave the twentieth massive bouquet into her hands. "I only know that his name is Harold Sarden and that our managers are pledged not to tell any more than that."

"And you mean he wasn't here tonight to see this wonderful success of his first play—this triumph of his art?"

"I do not know," said Hilda Wierum.

She hoped he had been.

She had played that night as never she had played before. The simple beauty of the youthful play, with its strange background of understanding and experience, had captivated her and compelled her highest art. She hoped he had been there—the man who wrote it. Perhaps a little of the gratitude for the personal triumph she had achieved in the leading role augmented the hope, but she was sincerely, deeply interested in the author of "The Road to Everywhere."

As she rode home in her limousine, that would carry only half the flowers which had been lavished upon her during the glorious night, she thought of the man of mystery.

"I'm going to do it," she said to herself, determinedly, as she looked in her mirror in the silver mounted boudoir of her apartment. "I'm going to write to him. He MUST get his mail through the office. I'm going to do it."

CHAPTER II

A little note amid the overwhelming heap of her morning's mail strengthened her determination. It said:

"My Dear Miss Wierum:

"I thank you for your wonderful performances in my play. I should like to express my appreciation personally, but there are reasons why I may not do so.

"With deepest appreciation,

"Harold Sarden."

If women did not know how absolutely stupid men are, they would think men a great deal more deceitful than any man ever was. Hilda, looking at that note—a note that seemed to have been positively designed to tantilize her—may have suspected just such a design for a minute. But she fell back on the world old truth—that men are "masterful fools" and decided that he meant only what he wrote.

She wrote to him, in care of the manager of the hotel

"Dear Mr. Sarden:

"I admire a man who can write a play such as the one I have the honor to appear in. Do come to see me. You will be more than welcome."

And Sarden came.

He had a battle with himself before he came. But he had sat in a back stall of the theatre on that opening night and he had seen a woman whom he thought the most beautiful woman in the world. He had heard her speak the lines of his little treasure-work as he had believed no living being could speak them.

Her note was crumpled roughly in his hand as he paced up and down his picture-, e little villa overlooking the broad Hudson from the cliffs that had been practically a recluse there for fifteen years. There he had labored among his books and his pictures, drawing nourishment from the beautiful like a bee drives from the hive.

CHAPTER III.

"Mr Harold Sarden!"

Hilda Wierum felt a little choking sensation of mingled pleasure and surprise as she read the card that her maid presented.

For the three weeks that "The Road to Everywhere" had been running she had been devoting herself ardently to her work in order to improve her part. The piece was overwhelmingly successful. But still she was not satisfied that she had fathomed some of the lines to the depth of meaning

She had often wished that she could talk to the author and draw his thought from his own lips—that why I go about very little," he answered. His voice was deep and full she might be sure.

And now he was here.

Hilda was a little bit frightened. What would he be like? She felt that he was young and she divined that he took things very seriously in spite of his light-hearted play

She turned and faced Harold Sarden.

A thrill of something akin to pain went through her. Involuntarily she reached for a chair. It was not so much that he looked as he did as that she had to admit to herself she cared how he looked. She controlled herself and turned to greet him.

The hand that received hers was a strong man's hand. But the man she looked upon was a cripple—a hunchback—a man of at least forty years, with nothing else but his magnificent head, his splendid, piercing gray eyes and lofty forehead—to give him grace in the eyes of a woman.

He saw that she was startled. A look of sadness passed over his face. Then he said quietly herself

"It is an honor that I appreciate very deeply—to have you come to see me," she said

"You can understand now, perhaps, why I go about so little."

She felt the mastery behind his weakness. She was even a little afraid of him.

They talked of casual matters of his play, of the stage in general, of her pictures and portraying.

"You wouldn't dare retell, to tell me, Mr. Sarden," said Hilda suddenly, "that because—because you are unlike other people physically, you shun other people intellectually?"

"I am afraid I do."

"I think it is wrong—I do not mean mind you—I mean I think it is WRONG!" she cried "Men like you have no right to absent themselves from the world of other men. They are needed. Their presence as well as their power is needed."

He looked at her astonished grateful.

"I am going to make you come to New York and see me. I work and come to see me every day. I want to ask you about the play—the things I don't understand."

"Oh, my dear Miss Wierum, it is impossible."

"But you will!"

"I will" he said hurriedly.

CHAPTER IV.

They were consulting about another scene that Sarden was at work on. Hilda was scolding him pretty much him lack of knowledge concerning women.

"You always make them plain—plain—PLAIN," she jeered. "You don't have all of them plain. There have to be a few with sense enough to—to—to—"

"I think they are few after they are pretty well reported."

His pretty daughter was standing almost crooked by his stool. His arms were about her. His lips were pressed against hers. He kissed her again and again, madly, desperately, as if he understood his last happiness in life had been cast away on the winds of his sudden impulse.

Bewildered, angry, she saw him rush from the room.

Sarden returned to the little villa on the Jersey cliff. He was ashamed and repulsed. He knew he had been a fool ever to venture from his retreat—ever to risk the life of other men—the peace of women.

The door opened softly.

"Hilda!"

"I'm sorry—like you—but disillusion—you would rather have never seen," said her voice breaking

"It is the only thing for a coward and I am one."

"You are to come to see me—to—to—"

"Mr. — proposed to man—" she stood archly, but there were tears in her eyes.

RITCHIE AND WOLGAST BOTH IN FINE FORM FOR BATTLE TONIGHT FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

ATLAS A. A. PLANS TO OPEN BOXING QUARTERS AT THE ARENA EARLY NEXT MONTH

RITCHIE AND AD WOLGAST IN RING BATTLE TONIGHT FOR LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE

By SOL PLEX.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 12.—When Ad Wolgast meets Willie Ritchie here tonight in a ten-round go he will have the opportunity to win back the title of champion of the lightweight division he lost several years ago, when he fouled Ritchie in the sixteenth round of their famous battle.

Wolgast now claims that he has recovered completely from the effects of the operation for appendicitis, which stopped him at the height of his career, while Ritchie is better now than ever and looks fit to fight the battle of his life.

DUTCH AGAINST DUTCH.

It will be Dutch [illegible] arena which will seat [illegible] people. Said gathering will [illegible] the Tom Andrews box office [illegible] $40,000 to see a half-hour, [illegible] less, of mulling between class leaders wearing five-ounce mufflers on their knuckles.

Some $50,000 has been wagered on the outcome of the [illegible] of which goes on the Lewandowski [illegible] along. The Wisconsin boxing [illegible] prohibits a decision by the referee.

The referee squabble was settled today. Harry Stout, who was objected to by the Ritchie [illegible] the past ten days, will be the [illegible] man in the ring.

Stout was not wanted by the champion because he is credited with permitting Wolgast to make rough tactics against Joe Rivers recently.

Wolgast did only light work in Milwaukee yesterday. He scaled to 132, and does not expect to make it beam tonight. Ritchie was at 127 yesterday. He says he will be under weight tonight.

The betting favors Ritchie at 10 to 7. While is because he is the champion and will have something of an advantage in weight, probably three pounds.

They are scheduled to start boxing at 10:30

BOTH MEN IN FINE SHAPE.

Willie is accused of being [illegible] wraps in his sparring bouts at [illegible]

O'Connell gym because he does not want to display any of his new fighting tricks to friends of Ad Wolgast, who have been looking him over in the camp tents. This accusation come from those who expect much of a champion even in his workouts with the big gloves and from those who are suspicious and inclined to think that the Californian is pulling a "Luther McCarthy" on the Cadillac Dutchman.

It will be remembered that when the late Luther was training at Los Angeles for a fight with Jim Flynn that he looked anything but good in his training before the match. Al was of the Pueblo Fireman who worked Luther went back to the Flynn quarters with the word that the big fellow was a "setup" for Jim. Considerable money was wagered on Flynn as a result. When they got into the ring McCarthy showed himself a sterling fighter and gave the oft-whipped Flynn one of the most severe beatings of his career.

The writer happened to be present recently when Ritchie [illegible] two rounds with Willie Schreck [illegible] two with Eddie Tancel. Eddie doubtlessly was not at his best clip at any stage, but it was [illegible] not to be expected. He was [illegible] ful with his fists at times and [illegible] loose with all his power or boxing skill. If he had, Ritchie might have been knocked out, they don't want such tactics in the local gymnasiums.

WILLIE WAS EXPERIMENTING.

Ritchie appeared to be practicing a few punches more than he [illegible] to be trying to give a display of boxing wares to those assembled. We noticed that two or three times he let his good right cross come [illegible] with great force, and that [illegible] the blow landed in Billy's [illegible] position which prevented a hard encounter of any kind.

No, Ritchie has not been "under cover." He simply was [illegible] with his aids, the while perfecting himself in a few things he intends to try in his quarrel with Wolgast at Thursday night.

Wolgast is [illegible] confidence. All declares that he never was better in his life, weighs [illegible] pounds and is absolutely confident of victory because "His hands are right for the first time in years."

The reader will remember that the Dutchman always has had a hard time with his fighting tools. After he won the championship from Freddie Welsh, in that forty-round fight, the first contest he engaged in was with Frankie Burns of Oakland. Burns stood up under a crushing licking for sixteen rounds, and then [illegible] Ad smashed on his maulers [illegible] Frankie operations were [illegible] on both thumbs, which [illegible] on the heidegger defense of Burns which consisted chiefly of hard elbows.

Some fourteen inches of wire were jammed into the right thumb by a coast surgeon. The wire is still there, too. If Wolgast [illegible] palms him no more, and that for the very first time in years the Burns fight he will take the ring with both a pair of perfect fighting hands.

"You know what that means when my hands are O. K.," he says in the letter to his manager.

RITCHIE ALSO SICK.

Ritchie admits that Wolgast sort of [illegible] him for the first half hour in that engagement, but he explains it this way:

"Wolgast outfought me in the early part of the fight because I was held back by Manager Billy Nolan. He told me to let Wolgast do the fighting and that sooner or later Ad would tire. It worked out all right, for Wolgast started to "blow" after the tenth round and I got him in the eighteenth.

Of course, I won't hold back this time. I'll start faster than he does. I see he sneers at me because I play golf. Well, I can beat him at golf and in the ring besides. What do you know about that?"

Andover Water Show.

LAWRENCE, March 12—The Phillips Andover swimming team gave an exhibition at the Y. M. C. A. swimming pool.

GET THE AMERICAN FOR BEST FIGHT STORY

Sam Hall, Sporting Editor of Hearst's Chicago Examiner, and Bud Fisher, the creator of Mutt and Jeff, will be sitting at the ringside tonight in Milwaukee when Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion, and Ad Wolgast, the former title holder, battle for ten rounds. There is a possibility that the crown may change hands. If you want to read the most interesting and accurate stories of this fight, don't fail to get tomorrow's Boston American.

Their Married Life

They Miss the Last Train and Spend the Night at a Miserable Country Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WARREN'S remarks as he gazed after the receding train were most emphatic. They had missed it by less than two minutes, and there was no other until morning.

"Oh, what shall we do!" What shall we do!" Helen was almost sobbing as she watched the rear lights of the 10:45 disappear in the distance.

To be stranded on Sunday night in a small town forty miles from Boston, with no trains until morning, was not a pleasing predicament. Still muttering strong and expressive expletives, Warren strode down the platform to where a solitary cabman was reaching them expectantly.

"Take us to Mr. Baldwin's—George W. Baldwin, on Maple Street. Know the place?"

The cabman said he did, and Warren put Helen into the cab, unmindful of her excited protests that they couldn't go back to Baldwin's.

"Where will they put us? Ethel has the spare room—it'll upset the whole house! Oh, Warren, can't we go to some hotel?"

"Can't go to a hotel without baggage," grimly. "It's up to Baldwin, any way. If he hadn't kept us there showing us his blasted old coins, we'd not have missed our train."

Helen knew that the Baldwins had invited them for the day only, because they were not fixed to entertain any one overnight, and she would rather have sat up in the station than to face the embarrassment of returning at this hour.

When the cab drew up before the Baldwin house the whole place was dark. Not even in the upper windows was there any light.

"They've all gone to bed! Oh, Warren, we can't get them up now!"

THE PALACE HOTEL

"The Palace, sir, that's where the travelin' men stop.

"Well, drive us there."

Again they rattled on through the dimly-lit streets.

"The Palace!" snorted Warren. "You can tell it's rotten by the name. Every bum town has a Palace Hotel and a Trade Emporium."

This time the cab stopped before a three-story frame house, painted a dingy yellow. Here, too, most of the windows were dark.

Inside the office was stifling with the odor of stale beer that came through the swinging door of the bar. A sleepy night clerk lowered his heels, and regarded them with interest.

Warren explained briefly that they had missed the last train. The clerk shoved forward the register. Taking a key from the key board, he led them up the brass bound steps.

The room he showed them into was large, but low-ceilinged and stuffy. He lit the single, unshaded gas jet and started out.

"See here," Warren thrust his hand into his pocket, "can't you get us a couple of extra sheets? We've no night things with us, and we can't sleep in our clothes."

"I'll see, sir, if the linen room's not locked."

Helen was gazing critically about the room. There was a bureau with a skimpy towel over its scarred top, a washstand with a blue-banded bowl and pitcher, a white iron bed swaying deeply in the centre, a much-stained carpet, and a square of oilcloth under the washstand.

There was also a brass spittoon, which Helen promptly poked out of sight with Warren's cane.

"Dear, I couldn't sleep anyway. I'll just loosen my waist and lie here on the couch."

"You'll do no such thing! You'll go to bed and get some rest so you'll not be whining around in the morning."

Turning down the covers, Helen scrutinized the bed linen. It was wretchedly laundered and of such thin, cheap muslin that the soiled dark ticking of the mattress and pillows showed through. The blanket and red-flowered comforter were far from clean, and over all was a dingy-white honeycombed spread.

"Dear, I WON'T sleep in that bed. I'd rather sit up all night."

A knock at the door, and the clerk handed in the two extra sheets. Warren, who this time was partly undressed, wrapped one around him toga fashion.

HELEN GETS THIRSTY

"What's that for?" he demanded, as Helen spread his handkerchief over the pillow when he started to get into bed.

"Oh, dear, I don't want you to lie on those pillows."

He grunted something about her being "too devilish particular," but Helen noticed that he kept the handkerchief under his head.

"Now, none of that foolishness," as, wrapped in his heavy overcoat, she started to lie down on the couch. "You'll catch cold there and be sniffling around all week. Come, get in bed and turn that light out."

Helen hesitated, then finally spread Warren's vest, lining up, over her pillow. Having taken off only her waist, with the sheet around her bare arms, she crept gingerly into bed. The mattress was hard and lumpy, and the springs creaked dismally.

She had turned down the gas as low as she could without turning it out, leaving the room in shadowy darkness, with a faint circle of light on the ceiling above the gas jet.

Helen had been thirsty ever since they left the Baldwins, but the exciting events had kept it a subconscious thirst. Now her throat felt parched. The demand for water was imperative.

Knowing that Warren was in no mood to be aroused, she waited until his breathing told her he was asleep. Then she sat up and felt for her shoes, at the edge of the bed. Not even in her stockings would she step out on that carpet.

She turned up the light, but there was no drinking water in the room. She took off the two clammy grayish-white towels that were folded over the wash pitcher, but she could not drink that water.

Throwing off the sheet, she slipped on her long coat and crept out in the hall. From the top of the stairs she peered down. The clerk was asleep in his chair. There was a water cooler over by the door.

Her consuming thirst gave her courage, and noiselessly she stole down the steps. Reassured by the clerk's heavy breathing, she reached the cooler, only to find there was no glass.

The dining room adjoined the office. It was dark, but she could see the shadowy white of the tables, and the reflection of some glassware on a mirrored sideboard.

AN ACCIDENT

She was starting back to the cooler, when she ran against a chair, tripped, fell, and the glass crashed to the floor.

For a moment she was too terrified to move. Then as she struggled to her feet, the night clerk rushed in.

"Who's there?" angrily. "What're you up to?"

He caught Helen by the shoulder and dragged her, speechless with fright, to the light.

Instead of a sneak thief, he had captured a young woman, with flowing hair and eyes dark with terror.

"I—I came down to get a drink," stammered Helen.

"Oh!" a gleam of intelligence came into his face, "you're the young lady in number 9? The one I got the sheets for? Why sure, miss, I'll bring up a pitcher."

Helen, painfully conscious of her unbuttoned shoes and her hair unbound for the night, was glad to escape up the stairs and into their room. She waited by the door, for fear the clerk would awaken Warren.

"Anything else I can do for you, miss?" his voice was needlessly loud as he handed in the pitcher.

"No, thank you," whispered Helen, with an anxious glance at Warren, who stirred uneasily.

"Hello, what's the matter?" Warren was now sitting up.

"Oh, I'm so sorry he woke you! It was the clerk, he brought me some water—I was almost famished. Do you want some?"

"No, I don't," savagely, "but I DO want some sleep! You're not satisfied with making us miss that blamed train, so you've got to keep me awake half the night, eh?"

"Why, Warren, I was ready long before"——

"Ready! You're NEVER ready! You were upstairs there half an hour powdering your nose. That's why we're in this blooming place!"

There was certainly some excuse for Warren's irritability, and Helen tried not to mind the injustice of it being vented upon her.

Again she turned down the gas and crept shrinkingly into bed. Carefully she pulled up the sheet, so the blanket would not touch her. The faint fragrance of cigars from Warren's vest, which she had spread over the pillow, helped dispel the musty odor of the bed clothes.

She was dreading the morning, dreading Warren's increased irritability when he awoke and found himself in this wretched hotel. She dreaded, too, the hour's trip before breakfast on that early morning train) for they would neither bathe nor breakfast at this place.

It would be a trying trip, she knew, and for all its discomforts SHE would be to blame[illegible] want to see. I've got a little matter here that's urgent. Just a minute and I will be with you."

* * * *

George Stuart was personal attorney to Jerrold Scott. His services were of incalculable value, and to a man of Scott's temperamental instincts they were indispensable. He knew the urgency of the importer's communication with him now was not something that Scott wished to impart, but something that he (Stuart) must divulge. There had been a certain Miss Wilson, whose abandonment of the duties of private secretary in this office had been rather precipitous. Stuart had been called upon to deal with her, as he had with others, and he had come to regret.

The spider had become enmeshed in his own web and the fly had sailed merrily away, leaving a bum of impending disaster in her wake. It had required a tactful and forceful demonstration of the lawyer's talents to extricate the spider, and having arrived fresh from the scene of the struggle, he looked askance at the demure and youthful successor at the typewriter.

What a blessing it would be, Stuart thought, if his friend could only be prevailed upon to eliminate temptation, or at least to lessen it. There were so many perfectly good stenographers who would be excellent from one standpoint and impossible from another. "But what's the use?" he mused, "geniuses like Scott are bound to be temperamental and he can afford a good fee.

The importer called his chief clerk again and made him known to the new secretary.

"You may take Miss Meyer through the general offices, Crane," he instructed, "it will be well for her familiarize herself with our ways, and you might prepare a list of our leading customers so she will have the names ready for reference. I will ring when I need her."

"Ring out the old, ring in the new," laughed the lawyer. "You're a good picker, Scott—sometimes."

The importer flushed slightly, but he drew back his shoulders with feigned dignity.

"Your levity is of less account than your legal services, my dear Stuart. I will thank you to report concerning the one and dispense with the other. But don't let this girl worry you," he added in ameliorating tone. "She's as safe as an old maid."

"I never worry, Scott," returned the lawyer good naturedly. "Not till something happens, at least. Then I do all the worrying."

"That's what you fellows are for, isn't it—to take the responsibilities of petty affairs off the minds of busy men?"

"Yes, in a way. But this case isn't so petty. Ten thousand dollars are the figures. A mere bagatelle to a millionaire, I suppose, at that."

"Not by a damn sight!" shouted the client. "I won't hear of it. It's blackmail—plain blackmail. You can drop the case, Stuart. I'll consult the District Attorney."

Stuart smiled cynically and tolerantly.

"I wouldn't do that if I were you. The District Attorney is a public official, you know, and affairs like this won't bear public scrutiny, whether you're the sinner or the sinned against. Better steer away from the courts and the newspapers, Scott."

The importer sighed resignedly.

"All right," he agreed. "Have your way, or part of it. I'll tell you what I will do. I'll pay that Wilson girl $5,000 and not one cent more. She can take it or she can take her troubles to the court. And if I take mine there she'll go to jail. It's just a case of mutual bluff and the one with the biggest stack will win. Of course, I can't afford to have my name brought into the papers over such an affair and neither can she afford to take the chance of conviction for blackmail.

"I might convince the girl of that, all right, Scott, but she's got a maiden aunt who seems to be just hankering for a bit of notoriety and the atmosphere of the jury box. I'll try again, however. By the way," he continued, indicating the seat that Gertrude Meyer had vacated, "has this new employe got a maiden aunt?"

HIS EXCUSES

"Oh, drop it, Stuart." Just because I've made one mistake is no reason why you should be continually bantering me about it. This little girl that I engaged today is only seventeen years old and she's under my protection. About the other one, I don't care a snap of my finger. It was her own fault. She encouraged it. Business life is full of that kind. They step in with their eyes open and then they shriek to high heaven. You know, Stuart, I believe there are a lot of pretty little pirates running around from one job to another just hoping some man will try to hold their hand or something so they can trot into a courtroom and tell their tale of woe. A jury of shoe clerks and ice wagon drivers, the men who beat their wives at home, but get gallant over some little working girl's sniffles and find a $10,000 verdict with a straight face, while they couldn't go out and earn a dime. I tell you the system's all wrong. The man always gets the worst of it—he hasn't any protection at all."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Smiling as an Aid to Health and Beauty

Some Up-to-Date Hints from Blanche Ring

"When I smile, I smile, and there's a reason," says Miss Ring.

By MAUDE MILLER.

"WHEN I smile, I smile, and there's a reason," said Miss Blanche Ring, wrinkling up her face for me adorably. "Don't you like the name of my new play? Every time I see 'When Claudia Smiles' I realize that I have a reputation to live up to, for when Claudia smiles Blanche smiles, and, as I said before, there's a reason.

"In these frolicsome days, when life seems to be composed of one tango tea after another, and when the athletic girl is hailed as she never was hailed before, there is a very grave problem to be considered. Yes, I can really consider very grave problems when I want to, particularly when the problems present a very serious drawback to smiles of any kind. And to come to the point, I mean that too many people are overexercising. Isn't that a serious problem? And yet I suppose you will call that miles away from a smile until I have explained the connection.

ALL DOING IT

"Don't over-exercise! I know we are all doing it. All beauty doctors when asked for their secrets proclaim in chorus, exercise, and we are exercising, and trying to be beautiful, but of course, we are overdoing it all. Now listen, for I am going to be quite concrete. Take any kind of exercise that we have selected for our special brand. Walking is perhaps most accessible, so why not take that? We walk, perhaps not too far, but with grim determination—we have heard that any normal woman should be able to walk five miles at a stretch—we accomplish the five miles, and then decide to establish a precedent, so we walk ten.

"We come back tired physically and mentally, with the muscles of our body easily reated, but with the muscles of our face dragged and weary from too much mental strain. But we continue to walk, confident that we are attaining beauty. Every day we repeat the same, we gain strong, healthy bodies, but by holding our minds in check, by allowing our minds to dwell continually upon the benefit we are to derive from the hours of compulsory exercise, we forget to have a good time with our thoughts, we forget to release them from the bonds of determination, we forget to let our minds soar away from our bodies, in short, in forgetting the ingredients of a smile we forget the smile itself.

DON'T GET TIRED

"Tired lines deepen over night in even a youthful countenance. That means under no conditions allow yourself to get tired. Keep your body in subjection to your mind, and, if possible, exercise both at the same time. If not, then arrange a play period for each, although that seems a dreadful waste of perfectly good time, don't you think so?

"I know that many people have discussed the smile question. It really isn't such a very easy thing to have a characteristic smile, but after all, with a little extra consideration, it is quite an attraction."

"It really isn't such an easy thing to have a characteristic smile."

A Thrilling Story of Today—How a Pretty Girl Won Her Fight for Love Against Tremendous Odds

Begin This Great Story Today by Reading This First

JERROLD SCOTT, a dignified-looking business man with offices in a big city skyscraper, advertises for a stenographer to act in the capacity of private secretary. Scott, although posing as an upright man, is in reality unscrupulous. He has several times been in trouble with stenographers to whom he made love, but persists in his infamy. Crane, his servile bookkeeper, sends in several applicants. Scott is struck by the physical attractions of Catherine Wiggins and questions her closely. He tells her to return at 11 o'clock. Jack Scott, the elder Scott's stepson, is junior partner of the firm. He has just come out of college and is expecting to be a full-fledged partner. While he is waiting for his father, Gertrude Meyer, the heroine of the story, comes in, looking for a position. Young Scott is greatly impressed by her beauty. He questions her. The elder Scott arrives. He is also interested at once in the pretty girl. After telling his son that he has taken him into partnership, Scott questions Gertrude. He is infatuated by her. He tests her work, and although she is woefully inefficient, he hires her at $10 a week.

"THERE'S your desk and chair," Scott directed. "You'll find paper and pencils in the drawer. Now, I'll tell my clerk to dismiss the other young ladies. Just make yourself at home."

She smiled graciously at him like a child with a new found toy. And he returned the look in kind.

He came back in a moment after instructing Crane to send away the score or more of competent stenographers that were waiting in the outer room. He walked briskly to his desk and took up some papers.

The new secretary glanced covertly at him from beneath her long lashes and pretended to be busying herself at the machine. But her head was in a whirl.

The words raced through her mind and down her very spine. They thrilled her and they startled her. She pinched herself to make sure that she was there; she felt the smooth surface of the polished mahogany to make sure that the desk was real. She took out a pad of paper for her notes and wrote: "I've got work; I've got work; I've got work!"

Yes, it was true. The scrawling shorthand symbols proclaimed it as. She had a position—it was all true! Mother's hands would come out of the washtub; Helene and Rudie would come out of the orphan asylum. There was some justice in the world now.

Her mental ejaculations were cut short by a knock at the door.

"Come in," Scott called. "Oh, hello, Stuart. You're just the man I want

SAVON CADUM

The "Green Stocking" Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GREAT many years ago when there was a lad for every lassie girls began in the playtime of their youth to prepare a store of household linen, for no girl was left uncourted after she had reached sixteen.

One after the other of the daughters in a family stepped forward in mathematical precision, and were promptly matched and dispatched, and it almost never happened that the swain who came a-courting looked beyond the oldest daughter of the house at her younger sister.

She was kept in the background until her elder sister was married off, because her oldest sister always married first. There was no doubt it would happen; it was as assured she would marry first as that the oldest tree in the forest is the first to fall.

Conditions have changed. There may still be a lad for every lassie, but lads have grown more wary in the disposition of their precious possessions, and lassies have grown more skeptical that the masculine personage is precious, and also more independent. Under the new dispensation, the man who comes courting picks out the girl he loves, and there is no painstaking him though there may be ten older sisters left hanging on the parent tree.

HE KNOWS

He knows, and his sweetheart knows, that if they sit down and wait till every older daughter is married off, they may be waiting when their locks are whitened, and the charms of youth which attracted each to the other have forever fled. They know, the parents know, and, alas, even the older sisters know, that marriage is no longer the common lot; but is becoming every day more uncommon.

He knows and she knows and the old gray world knows that Love is too precious to be put aside because, perchance, there remains an older sister to whom the story has never been told, or whose ears have been sealed by fashionable skepticism to the sweetness of the tale. And so, when Love comes to them, they welcome it, and the parents welcome it, and the older sisters will welcome it if their hearts are still sweet, and no one remembers that many years ago it such a thing happened all the older sisters would have to wear green stockings as a mark of disgrace.

A STRANGE OBJECTION

Knowing all this, how surprising the predicament of a young man of twenty-eight who writes me that he has been keeping company for five years with a girl four years his junior; that he is in position financially to marry; they love each other, and the girl's mother objects because an older sister is left over!

If this is the only objection, marry and make no delay in getting married. You will show little appreciation of the happiness that has been put within your reach if you let an obstacle like this stand in your way.

Green stockings, my dear young man, are no longer worn.

THE TEST

"Your Honor," said the counsel, "this man's insanity takes the form of a belief that everyone wants to rob him. He won't allow me, his counsel, to approach him."

"Maybe he's not so crazy after all," murmured the Court, in a judicial whisper.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weak this afternoon and markets were very dull. Morning business did not amount to 10,000 shares in New York and trading was stagnant over midday. Rock Island 4 per cent. bonds sold at 29¾, a new low record. Stocks declined at the start, and while losses were mostly fractional they were significant of a general sentiment.

Declines in New York included Canadian Pacific 3, Canadian Pacific 2, Southern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ¾, Reading ¾, New Haven ¾, American Can ¾, Steel ¾, Amalgamated ¾, American Smelting ⅝, Northern Pacific ½, Baltimore & Ohio ⅝, Union Pacific ⅝, American Sugar ½ and United Fruit was off ¾.

In Boston Federal shares were off, but Boston & Maine had recovered and was a point higher. Boston Elevated, Sugar common was up ½, and preferred off a point. Boston Edison declined 4, and American Telephone ¼. Among mines Mohawk included, Calumet lost another dollar, Isle Royale 1½, Old Dominion 2½, Granby ¾ and North Butte ¼.

PRICES EASED OFF.

Prices eased off more when the New York market opened, under influence of yesterday's unsettling and bearish sentiment making Americans in London were heavy sellers. Almost all business in such securities done there of late on Continental orders have been sales. There is a steady unloading of Americans abroad. Foreigners do not like the policy now governing American railroads and they regard the Wilson administration as weak and unsettling. The idea of the head of a Department of State neglecting his duties to make a lecture tour while foreign relations of his country are in a critical condition is incomprehensible to Europeans. They do not believe there can be any strength to investments in a country where there is no strength, or at least comprehension, on the part of its executive.

Regarding the New York opening, a wire from Wall Street says: "American Sugar and Canadian Pacific sustained the biggest losses at the opening, the former receding 1¾ and the latter 1¾. Weakness in Sugar was due to the bearish attitude expressed by that company, while Canadian Pacific, the weakest of the railroad group, followed the London lead. Pressure of Rio Grande common sold down one point and a similar loss was registered in American Smelting. Even Bethlehem Steel, which has just issued the most encouraging report for its history, declined fractionally."

TRADING WAS QUIET.

Fluctuations were narrow, the average and trading was still smaller. It is said the only part that showed interest are leaders in the market is to accumulate a few issues on declines. They are finding that the drift downward favorable for getting stocks cheap. Participation by outsiders will not be a factor. Professional traders have to be exceedingly alert, as they have to cut a living. "Watchful waiters" are reading a good deal into the recent effect that this is a good time to buy, but scepticism prevails. Two statements appearing in the Sunday review of "The Situation" reflect very well the conservative point of view constitute what is known as "the public." They read:

"General business is as favorable as it was judged would be the case at this time. The volume of business is not up to the business of a year ago, but is in excess of the business of 1912, and yet much of this volume of business is due to the fact that termination of the war in Europe over enough will bring about a resumption of normal conditions. There are those who believe that the present is a time to buy stocks and the other conditions are bound to improve."

"The present is a time to sell stocks and the other conditions are bound to grow worse."

TONE GREW WEAKER.

In the second hour the tone seemed weaker. A number of issues sold below opening prices. There were few stocks which maintained earlier gains but disappointment in the metal was one of them. Coppers were in more supply than demand. The metal market is not improving, and prices are receding in London, where large producers are offering electrolytic on the basis of 14.27 cents a pound. The warrants market had been dull. Here for months. Price recessions marked it today. It is said that the new vein in the Arizona Copper property is about fifteen feet wide, and making a rich showing. By declaring a quarterly dividend of $1 a share, Old Dominion of Maine, the mining company, puts it on a dividend rate from $5 to $6.

At a first hour report in New York by United States Express its 166,000 shares could be realized at 75@75.99 compared with 115,100 odd lots sold the month. Most of the stock belongs to the E. H. Harriman estate. It is forced by some traders that at the liquidation which is announced are being tentatively decided upon.

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headaches and Dizziness.

"Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very unGrateful if I failed to write to you for I have taken it at different times and I always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I was a woman complain I always find relief in it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backaches, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headache, dizziness, insomnia, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me, so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. I shall use my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. ORPHA TURNER, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

We challenge any one to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in curing the ills of women as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Sturdy American Party the Political Need Today

Do the Republicans and Progressives in Congress recognize the political opportunity which the determination of the Democratic President to force the Democratic Congress to repudiate its platform and bow the national neck before British arrogance offers them?

There will be need for a party to which may turn self-respecting Americans, citizens who believe that the liberties won by the Revolution, and defended by war and diplomacy ever since, should not in a moment of profound peace and unprecedented national power be basely surrendered at the whim of an Anglomaniac President.

The Democratic party, with but few honorable exceptions, seems content to accept Wilson as its leader and dictator, though he lead it to national ignominy, and dictate only a policy of cowardice and national abasement.

What will it profit the people if the lesser domestic disorders be successfully quieted, but the way be left open, without defence, for foreign governments to enter in and enforce their demands upon our Congress; if, indeed, an invitation be extended to foreign Powers not liking our sort of legislation to call at the Department of State and have the offensive laws repealed?

The national independence written into the famous declaration by the Democrat Jefferson, defended on the bloody field of Chalmette by the Democrat Jackson, and reiterated in no uncertain phrase by the Democrat Cleveland, has been repudiated, reviled, spat upon, by the new type of Democratic administration.

If the members of his party in Congress allow themselves to be coerced into abandoning the leadership of the great fathers of their party and follow the vague wanderings of this will-o'-the-wisp over the marshes of party perfidy to the slough of national ignominy, they will find themselves in a predicament from which not all the offices still retained by the President for Congressional bait will save them.

All political parties in this country acknowledge ours to be a government by the people. The Democratic party has been loudest in its profession of attachment to this theory of our American government.

A government by the people means a government by a majority of the people. The political party is the machinery by which the will of the majority is ascertained. It is the only method devised by which the people can make known and carry out their will.

When the responsible leaders of the Democratic party formulate their party platform and the party, in national convention, solemnly adopts it and invites the support of the American people upon it and is put into power for the purpose of carrying out its provisions and then proceeds to repudiate its obligations, it is repudiating a government by the people.

This is exactly what the Democratic party will do if it follows President Wilson in his attempted betrayal of the Democratic platform on the question of free tolls for our coastwise ships. He was nominated on this platform. He accepted it and expressly bound himself to be faithful to it. He discussed the provision of the platform concerning the Panama Canal and explicitly approved of it during the campaign.

It is true that the great English newspapers said that he would talk one way before election and would talk another after election. But the American people did not believe that any man nominated by a great political party to the great office of President could be guilty of such moral turpitude. Yet, it appears that the English newspapers are right. Now Mr. Wilson is asking the American Congress to turn a somersault and to acknowledge that its interpretation of our treaty rights is wrong and that its view of our honor was low.

Two years ago a Democratic majority in Congress passed a law permitting our coastwise ships to use the canal free of tolls. The national Democratic convention pledged the Democracy to free tolls. The highest interests of the country demands free tolls, our self-respect demands that we shall insist upon free tolls and the Democratic party is bound on its sacred honor to stand fast to its promise in behalf of free tolls.

William J. Bryan was on the sub-committee on resolutions which wrote the platform. John W. Kern, the Democratic leader of the Senate, was chairman of the committee. Mr. Bryan has said many times that "a man who violates a plank in the platform is worse than a thief."

For the first time in twenty years the Democratic party has been placed in power by the people. It ought to be on its good behavior now if ever, because it has not yet had time to feel the contamination of power and because it is a minority party, depending entirely upon its good behavior for its lease of power. Yet, if this party repudiates its platform and sacrifices its honor and its country's honor, its interest and its country's interest, its soul is dead. It is a useless and dangerous derelict which ought to be sunk for the safety of honest and patriotic navigators of the ship of State.

It cannot be that the Democratic masses will tolerate the sacrifices of the substantial interests of this country to obtain permission by Great Britain to pursue a mistaken and injurious policy toward Mexico.

The floundering of the administration in its foreign policy has been unspeakable.

Mexico, which in 1845 we properly disciplined to its own good, and later protected against European aggression to show our good faith, flouts our government and outrages our citizens with impunity.

Japan insists upon interfering in our domestic affairs, and no firm note of defiance has ever been sent her.

England presents the affront, the President quails before it, and the Democratic Congress bids fair to grovel with him.

In such a situation the Democrat imbued with true Americanism will look about for a party to which he may belong without sacrifice of his self respect.

Democrats who repudiate the mastery of Wilson have but two courses open to them. They must break his power by defeating his aim to reduce Congress to .. mere rubber stamp for the registering of his will. Or they must leave a party which is weak enough to be thus bossed.

If the latter alternative becomes necessary a truly progressive, bravely American party would receive the hosts of recruits. The opportunity for the Progressives and Republicans in Congress has not had its like in half a century.

The Winning

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

YOU toiled, my tired brother, and you won;
You dreamed and saw your wondrous dream come true;
Yet who was ever happier than you
Before your bruising battle had begun?
Who ever looked upon the rising sun
With purer joy, or trod the flashing dew
With more abandon? Dreams, all dreams, you knew
And nothing else. Tonight your dream is done.

How strange it is that you have reached your goal
And cannot find one thrill of honest joy!
How sad the knowledge, when you search your soul,
That all achievement is a gilded toy!
This span we live would be a gift to prize
If we could dream and never realize.

Questions Answered

R. J.—In 1913 the total number of strokes of lightning causing damage was 6,344. The number of buildings wholly or partially destroyed was 6,643. The number of persons killed or injured aggregated 1,625. The value of property destroyed $4,500,000. Father Jupiter seems to care less for human beings than he does for corn, sheep and horses, for of these his bolts killed only some 4,000.

W. J. H.—Let it be said, once and for all, that any one, if a duly qualified American citizen, can constitutionally run for the high office of President of the United States. No matter what his "religion" may be, he can run, get elected (provided he can find enough people to give him their votes) and take his seat without any Constitutional objections.

Hurly-Burly of the Bishops

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D., LL. D.

(The British Primate has decided that the Kikuyu "heresy and schism" controversy shall be referred to the consultative body of Bishops, which will meet in July.)

THE headline cannot be defended. Yet under this caption the matter is being discussed in three continents. So, for want of a better title, it must serve.

It began in Kikuyu, in East Africa, last June. It kindled a flame in England which reason cannot quench. Roman Catholic Europe is eagerly following the course of events. In America the discussion has significance for all religious people, of all creeds and churches, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

For the following account of what really happened at Kikuyu I am indebted to the Rev. Norman Maclean, who was present at the conference. I summarise his story as it appears in a British journal.

The background of the scene is a divided and distracted Christianity face to face with a united, aggressive, self-confident Mohammedanism and a degraded and hostile heathenism in the heart of Africa. Every Mohammedan is a missionary, his soul flaming with fanatic faith. Long ages ago the faith of Mohammed overflowed the enfeebled churches of Asia. Islam has won Northern Africa. Is it now to dominate and possess East and Central Africa?

Christian missions are divided. Christian missionaries represent many churches and denominations. The native mind is confused. One mission has a priest in flowing robes, an elaborate ritual, a service of pomp and ceremony. Another has a preacher who wears the white duck of common life and no ritual at all. The various missions lack coherence, follow no common objective, act upon no settled policy. The best of the missionaries deplore it, feel themselves humiliated by it, foresee only defeat at the hands of the Mohammedans as the result of it. They have set themselves to correct it.

* * *

Conferences were held in 1907 and 1909. Last year the missionaries did something besides confer. They agreed upon a scheme of federation. All the Protestant churches in East Africa were represented. The scheme adopted was not based on compromise, but on comprehension. Each church was left free within its own domains. But it was agreed that an order of worship should be drawn up, common to all; that missionaries should be encouraged to use this form as frequently as they themselves found convenient in order that natives traveling from one part of the country to another should find wherever they went and in all the missions a similarity of service. No new church was contemplated. Yet the scheme of federation did unquestionably look toward an ultimately united Christianity in the countries covered by the British East Africa Protectorate.

So far so good. It was decided that the proposals agreed upon should be sent to the ecclesiastical authorities in Great Britain. The missionaries felt that they had prepared for the coming of a great and glorious day.

They did more. And now the gravity of their offence begins to appear. That same evening the members of the conference assembled in one of their churches and received the Holy Communion from the hands of the Bishop of Mombasa. They did not know that they were doing anything wrong. Mr. Maclean, whom I am quoting, writes:

"I have taken part in many communion services, from the hethered people of the Scottish highlands to the highlands of Nyasaland, in great cathedrals and in lowly churches, but I was never at a communion service over which the Spirit of God so palpably brooded as at that service in the little church at Kikuyu. All around lay the darkness of heathenism. In the bush the Kikuyu exposed their dying to the hyenas. The villages were filled with abomination. But here men and women gathered at the feet of God and realised that all differences were swept away and that they were one. The joy in their hearts rose from this thought; that they were in some small measure fulfilling the prayer of their Lord that 'they may be one that the world may believe.'"

* * *

Thus Mr. Maclean. But in England the storm has broken into fury. In the "religious press"—so often more hopelessly irreligious than some of the "yellow" journals—passion has risen high.

The correspondence columns of British daily papers are the safety valve of controversy. So the bishops write to the Times. One says: "To the great mass of High Churchmen the open communion of Kikuyu seems to involve principles so totally subservive of Catholic order and doctrine as to be strictly intolerable, in the sense that they could not continue in a fellowship which required of them to tolerate the recurrence of such incidents."

Against this another bishop declares: "If the English Church comes to pronounce authoritatively such action heretical, a new epoch of vital or mortal import will enter her history."

Let us be thankful for America, and for her contribution to religious liberty. It was not for nothing that Dr. Eliot, then president of Harvard, wrote [illegible] water-gates of the Chicago Exposition, twenty-one years ago, amid the splendors which represented the achievements and conquests of four centuries.

Germany's Fresh Air Project

By EDWIN MARKHAM

IN Elmer Roberts' instructive book, "Monarchical Socialism," I find record of a scheme that could well be put into effect on the outskirts of some American cities also. It will appeal to all of moderate income:

"The passion of the town-dweller for the country, the town-dweller of modest income, causes the large towns and cities in Germany to be encircled with what looks like the shantties of squatters in the West. Around Berlin are sones of open fields divided into tens of thousands of plots of fifteen to twenty yards square, often larger, which are let for the Summer to people of the city.

"Each rectangle is a miniature country place. The skilled workman, the small storekeeper, the professional man of moderate income rents one of these little farms and builds a tiny house upon it. He is expected to build this house himself, and it is considered bad form to call in carpenters or professional help. Two hundred dollars spent on a house would be extravagant, and the building, with Spring repairs, lasts for years.

"I know nothing like this in other countries. There must be a hundred thousand of these improvised villas in the environs of Berlin, each the fresh-air base of a family, plot set on plot with footways between, in groupings called arbor colonies. It is said as political pleasantry that these are the only successful colonisation projects of the Empire.

"The people who cannot go away for long to the seashore or to the mountains find in these daylight settlements that contact with green things and sunshine and air means health of spirit and reconciliation to the arid life of the city. The jangled spirits of the factory or shop-driven employe are quieted and rested and "tonicked-up" for the battle of the next day. The mental effects on the grown people are as obvious as the health and fun that the children get.

"The German nature-cult apart from sport has a deeper influence probably upon the whole nation than among any other people. School children are taken into the country one or two days every week by one of the teachers and taught the names and the meaning of things they see.

"Troops of boys and girls, each with a lunch-box or knapsack, walk for miles into the country, through the public forests, learning the names of the plants, the animals and the birds, and how they grow, the simple outlines of mineralogy, and the components of the earth. The children have a fine day in the open air and gradually learn to understand and to love the fields and the woods."

How Anna Gould's Peculiar Ideas of Marriage Made Papal Court Annul Her Own

The actual testimony that caused the ecclesiastical tribunal at Rome to declare that she never was the wife of Count Boni de Castellane; what her mother-in-law thought of her; her jealousies, and all the other hidden bitternesses of the most notorious international "romance," revealed at last in a double-page article of remarkable interest in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN. Also note the following big exclusive features:

Why Dancers Are So Dangerous.

Science finds, as Professor Edgar Rice of Columbia University explains in this page, that their fascination is due to their power to awaken the primitive dreams of conquests created by the first priestesses when men still lived in caves.

Breeding Just the Right People for Any Vocation

Dr. C. B. Davenport, the distinguished biologist, shows how children can be born boat-builders, electricians, actors, or with special aptitude for any calling, and he points out that the factors of heredity which made Ethel Barrymore and her family great are the same which produced the wild Australian bushmen.

Does Killing Germs in Milk Make Us Eat More Dirt?

Pasteurization destroys the disease microbes, but some believe it encourages uncleanly methods on the part of the dairymen and dealer by making such methods less easy to detect.

No Man Ever Killed Himself for Love

Science finds that there is really no such thing as a man committing suicide because of an unfortunate love affair, and that the cases in which women take their lives for a similar reason are extremely rare.
